CITY HALL SCANDAL

SAYS COUNCIL SEIZES BOOZE

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Sept. 10.—Charging that the police station is a source o fliquor supply for members of the city council, James F. Shanley, chief of police, today threatened to rip open the surface harmony of the city administration, if council members persist in getting booze from police headquarters. When Mayor Short demanded Shanley's resignation Sunday, the chief told the mayor:

"You go to h—— and get out of my office."

The mayor walked out.

Disappearance of forty gallons of liquor from the police chief's office, destined for the grand jury room, started the fight Sunday. The bottles had been emptied and filled with water. Asked for an explanation, Shanley said.

"Don't blame me. I have written order ssigned by council members to deliver the liquor to their homes and at the homes of their friends."

Chief Shanley refused to divulge the identity of the councilmen implicated in the traffic.

WOMEN TO DIET AND SHOW EARS

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Women must diet and show their ears to be stylish this autumn and winter. An era of slender Spanish vamps is dawning.

This was the edict issued today by the Fashion Art league of America, opening its annual convention here.

Extreme straight lines, emphasizing the slim figure, and high coiffures, leaving the ears almost wholly exposed, are the chief innovations, according to Mme. Alla Ripley, Chicago modiste and president of the league.

"Women will have to turn to dieting on a very intensive scale if they would appear to best advantage in the new models," Mme. Ripley said.

"The lines will be sharp and straight; the sleeves either long and tight or none at all; and there must be no wide flares about the hips.

"Skirts will be extremely long for evening wear, slightly shorter for afternoon, and very high for the street.

"Colors will vary—extreme bright hues being in vogue for evening and subdued shades for daytime. Green and blue afternoon gowns must be of darker shades. Brown will be very popular.

'Furs will be worn more than ever. Hip-length fur coats will predominate for the street and fur-trimmed capes and wraps for evening. Three-piece suits will be trimmed with fur.

"The hair must be worn on top of the head," Mme. Ripley said. "No buns over the ears, no heaviness at the back. Women may cover the top of thefr ears ever so slightly, but it would be better to leave them entirely exposed. Bobbed hair is passe.

"High, elaborate combs—somewhat Spanish—will be proper. Earrings will be a necessity and they will be very extreme in design as well as length."

High fur collars, Mme. Ripley said, would protect the ears which, she said, she believed had become tender under buns for so long a time.

MANIAC SUBDUED BY TEAR BOMBS

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Sept. 10.—Tear bombs today subjugated Walter Cochran, alleged maniac who shot his wife, his mother-in-law and two policemen, and stood off the entire Belleville police force for four hours behind the barricaded doors of his home.

An armored St. Louis police car loaded with sharpshooters was rushed here to end a battle of several hours between police and the mad man.

The slayer successfully held off eighteen attackers. The reinforcements in the armored car were armed with rifles, tear bombs and riot guns.

STATE SEIZES AUTOMOBILE

Colored Pair Sent to Jail and Car Carrying Liquor Is Confiscated.

Cavanaugh Gilum, colored, suffered his fairly new Haynes seven passenger touring car to be confiscated by authorities and was fined $100 and costs when he pleaded guilty before Justice of Peace Stevens Monday morning to a charge of unlawful transportation of liquor and abatement of a nuisance. Florence Hall, colored, who was arrested with him, also pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and costs. She was charged with illegal transportation and illegal possession.

According to state law enforcement officers, who apprehended the large auto on the highway east of the city and took the dusky pair into custody tiesSunday afternoon, a pint and two half pint botles were concealed upon the person of the lady. The car looked suspicious and while the officers were searching the layout the tinkle of glassware prompted them to make a more careful search.

Neither of the defendants was able to pay the fine imposed and they were committed to jail.

Harley F. Stevens, arrested in University Place Sunday on a charge of illegal possession of liquor, was fined $100 and costs in Justice court the same day. He had one gollon of the liquid the officers say.

A Ford touring car, owned by Dean Albertson, was confiscated and he was fined $100 and costs in Jusctice court Monday morning when he pleaded guilty to a charge of illegal transporntation of liquor. Two quarts were found in his auto, state officers claim.

ARRESTED AS RUM RUNNERS

Tw oMen Seized in Omaha, Said to Have Had Gun Battle With Federal Agents at Border.

OMAHA, Sept. 10.—Ray Compton and William Reimer, alleged Omaha rum runners, arrested shortly after noon today, are said by police to have been principals in a gun battle with federal agents while running booze over the Mexican border near El Paso, Tex., September 2.

According to reports here one of the federal agents was run over by the rum runners' cars and had both legs broken and suffered internal injuries.

New School at DuBois.

BARNESTON, Neb., Sept 10—The village at Du Bois, in Pawnee county east of here, has recently completed a new high school building, which will be formally ushered into service today, it not having been near enough completed to see any service before last year's school term expired. The building is made of Fairbury brick, it is modern, and large enough to accommodate the school population there for many years, and was completed at a cost of $27,000. The old building on the same lot, after having been used for twenty-nine years, was sold to several of the farmers in the vicinity and they took it away in sections, or tore it apart, and used the lumber on their respective farms for barns and cribs.

ECLIPSE OBSERVED BY MANY IN WEST

Giant Shadows, Traveling Twenty-five Miles a Minute Blanket San Diego.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 10.—The total eclipse of the sun by the moon, was observed by thousands around San Diego today.

Mists cleared as the giant shadow, traveling twenty-five miles a minute, blanketed the city.

As the moon encroached upon the sun's apparent rim, there was "turning down" of the sun's light.

Scientists twisted thumb screws and made final adjustments of costly instruments.

Airplanes, laden with scientists, took off for the darkened heavens.

Sudden cool gusts of wind, released from the command of the solar energy, swept in from the sea as darkness descended.

Chickens, puzzled by the abrupt night, took to their roosts.

Animals in the zoo paced their cages nervously.

Artificial lights were turned on. At 12:25 only a small crescent of the sun showed.

The moon covered all but the lower left hand segment.

Breezes, blowing from the south, were cooler.

High above the fog covered sky the hum of airplane motors were heard. Seventeen planes, headed by Lieut. John A. MacReady, ace of the flyers, were snapping pictures.

At 12:30 the fog appeared again and apparently scientists at Point Loma and Lakeside would be thwarted in their efforts for clear pictures of the Corona.

Traffic was at a standstill. Automobiles halted at the curb and street cars and other vehicles were motionless.

Thousands hastened to the back country in the hope of finding bright sunshine.

They were disappointed in their efforts, however, for practically the same weather conditions obtained as in the city—a haze that partly obscured the phenomenon.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—For a few brief moments the "sun went out" today.

Promptly at 12:01 p. m. the eclipse of the sun by the moon was visible here.

While thousands of people peered at the heavens thru smoked glasses here and at points farther south in California, and astronomers began their scientific observations, the moon slowly obscured the golden disk of the sun Darkness began falling.

At 1:15 p. m. there was just a suggestion of sunlight here—with a peculiar gray cast mixed with the yellow of sunlight.

Electric lights were not absolutely necessary, but it was dark enough so that they were a definite aid to reading.

The Handy Man.

Chicago Daily News: "We're so glad you came, Aunt Miranda," said the young woman who had met the train.

"Thanks," said Aunt Miranda shortly, as she straightened her hat. "I had to do it."

"How did you leave Cousin Jonathan and Cora?"

"All right, I guess," sniffed Aunt Miranda.

"And Alfred, the boy genius—how was he?" persisted the young woman.

"That brat," snorted Aunt Miranda, with fire in her eye. "'Boy genius'—that's what Jonathan and Cora call him too. Plain putterer, I call him. Nothing but laziness ever inspired any of his contraptions. I stood him for nearly year, but I reached my limit last week. I shall never go back there again, never."

"What has Alfred done now, Aunt Miranda?"

"What hasn't he done. The day I landed there last winter was bitter cold. Alfred was taking care of the furnace. I noticed that it was insufferably hot in the house, and when I inquired as to the cause Cora proudly told me that Alfred had invented a thermostat all his own, that the care of the furnace might prove too great for his strength.

"When we got up in the morning, however, not a room in the house registered over 20 degrees, and when we investigated we found that the furnace was devoid of any fire whatsoever. Alfred's thermostat had only one drawback. It would not keep the house at mid-July heat without coal on the fire and Alfred invariably forgot to supply the coal.

"When spring came and Jonathan began spending most of his time in the garage Alfred rigged up a series of electric signals from the house to the yard so that he would not have to stop whatever he happened to be doing and call his father when the necessity arose. One ring meant telephone, two dinner and three a caller. Usually everybody got the signals mixed up and Jonathan would come stamping in shouting for food when the exclusive neighbors had dropped in for a call. The climax came when he hurriedly rushed up the back stairs, shaved and changed all his clothes, thinking there was a caller, when it turned out to be the telephone."

"Poor Cousin Jonathan," from the diplomatic hostess.

"About the same time Alfred was given the duty of watering the lawn. He was supposed to get up at 5 each morning and set the sprinkler going. That proved too much of a task for the boy genius so he mounted the sprinkler on the clothes pole in the back yard and connected it with an alarm clock in some way, so that when the alarm went off at 5 the sprinkler automatically started sprinkling without disturbing little Alfred's rest. Cora and Jonathan thought that was awfully clever until one afternoon Cora was giving a garden party to the city's elect. Promptly at 5 the sprinkler sprinkled and quite completely dampened the ardor of the garden party to say nothing of the garden party's clothes."

"How awful!' said the sympathetic young woman.

"Well, I didn't mind that so much," continued Aunt Miranda grimly. "I didn't get wet, you see, and they did look awfully funny when they went dripping home. However, I was more than passingly annoyed at Alfred's new-fangled burglar alarms when they woke me at all hours in the night. But I reached my limit when he—wait, isn't that a jewelry shop?" She clutched her companion's arm.

"Let me out. Where's that clock?" And hauling from beneath her baggage a large and beautiful mahogany clock she said, "I brought this clock from Germany before the war. I paid $500 for it because it had rare and beautiful chimes, exactly like those in Westminster Abbey Do you blame me for leaving when Alfred undertook to make them play 'How Dry I Am'?"

Young Intellectuals.

The rise of the self-styled Young Intellectuals and their challenge of America's right to create its own litterature, brings forth what has been called Emerson Hough's last message to the American people. The author of "The Covered Wagon" had the following to say in the Story World and Photodramatist:

"Not so long ago, I had one of the intellectuals pointed out to me on the street. I was introduced to him. I shed tears over my inability to admire him as I was asked to do; but in good sooth I did not admire his conceit, his boots, his neckties or his nails.

Neither do I admire the stilted self-consciousness, the smirking affectation, the grinning pornography which make the hallmarks of much of the 'new literature,' the 'new culture' of our country, as depicted by some writers who for all of my knowledge may belong to the Young Intellectuals. The hair rose on the back of my neck as I viewed my example of new culture.

"I say, the hair rises on the back of my neck at the thought of such representatives of any American culture. To me, such men—such books—are utterly loathesome. I do not like them, do not need them. They are not, thank God! American in any true sense. And if the indorsement of any so-called 'set,' so-called 'school,' be shibboleth in literature today, I am content to remain of those who know litle of adenoids or garlic, who need no aphrodisiac when they love or write of loving, and are not concerned with the sacred contents of the bathroom cabinet. I am content to take my chance with the sky and the hills, the people and the customs of a country which once, at least, was America. * * * I fancy also that when the time for trouble shall come in this country—as I myself believe it one day will, and that not so long hence—it will be the old frontier stock of America who will be found in the saddle running things. Our really great men in every line always have come from that stock and always will. Count your great writers. Of what stock? How many?

"Be sure, when this republic shall have grown old enough to have a distinctive literature, that will be a literature of our people, for our people—and by our ptople. For this inthrust, transient, babbling, self-conscious, let us only say, rapidly, ca passe, ca passe, ca passe, ca passe!

"Yet you ask. Are Americans people! Believe me, yes—the most criminally careless people in the world, the most easily gulled. A cloud looks to us monstrous like a camel, if that be suggested to us blatantly enough. We are persuadable that a Bubbly Creek phosphorescence born of stockyards offal is of the same luminence as that of a far clean star. We let men tell us of Russian cockroaches and Syrian garlic when we could lift up our eyes to tall hills, wide and sweet skies, and men and women walking, tall, strong—and clean."

LEAGUE AGAIN EVADES ISSUE

Adjourns for Day to Evolve a New Plan.

CANNOT DELAY FOR LONG

Greco-Albanian Relations Are Strained.

Athens Government Has Demanded That Albania Hand Over Those Responsible for Slaying Italians.

GENEVA, Sept. 10.—The league of nations today once more evaded the question of its competency to deal with the Greco-Italian embrolio by adjourning. While the adjournment was ostensibly voted out of sympathy for Japan, the action was interpreted as a maneuver to prevent dissatisfied nations from enforcing action by the assembly on the question of competency challanged by Mussolini.

In informed quarters it was agreed it would be impossible to delay the question for more than twenty-four hours longer. Leaders hope to evolve by Tuesday some method of handling the question, designed to prevent a rupture.

The assembly must declare its competency or admit itself powerless to deal with major international disputes it was conceded.

ATHENS, Sept. 10.—Relations between Greece and Albania are strained as a result of an attempt by the Greek government to fix the blame for the Janina assassinations from Albanians.

The Albanian government has communicated with Greek authorities at Epirus forbidding Greeks to enter Albania, even if they possess passports.

Greece has demanded that Albania hand over those responsible for the slaying of the Italian commissioners at Janina within five days from last Saturday.

CROWDS VISITED MUSEUM

During State Fair Week Average Attendance Was Between Six and Eight Hundred.

Between 600 and 800 people visited the state museum on the University of Nebraska campus daily during state fair week. Guides were stationed on the various floors to receive visitors, guide them around and explain objects of interest. Mrs. A. G. Redford was in charge of the first floor, Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Foster on the second, and Mr. Collins on the top floor. Three large electric microscopes were kept running illustrating living objects in pond water. These were demonstrated by Miss Lyman and Fred Knight. An optical lantern showing the animals of Nebraska and the Badlands, whose bones are found in the museum, was in charge of Mrs. Foster, who gave lectures every half hour.

Many distinguished visitors from other states were among those who examined the museum exhibits with apparently great interest.

OBSERVE JEWISH NEW YEAR

Services for the Orthodox Synagog, Tifereth Israel, Will Begin Monday at 7 p. m.

Observance of the Jewish New Year will begin at 7 p. m. Monday for the congregation Tifereth Israel, Eighteenth and L. Rabbi M. Medvedoff will conduct services.

Services at Temple B'Nai Jesurun will be conducted at 8 p. m. at Fraternity hall by Rabbi Jacob Singer; subject of address, "A Song of Life."

Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, is the most important holiday in the Jewish calendar. It is observed by every Jew in the entire world. The sacred day is based principally on the day of judgment on which all the inhabitants of the world pass for judgment before the Creator. The principles inculcated at this season relate to the purifying of the soul and appeal to the heart to be righteous and good in the future and to repent of sins committed in the past. The season is also observed by sounding the Shofer, or ram's horn, during the morning services of the first and second day.

LINCOLN SCHOOLS OPENED

Much Redistricting of Pupils Necessary on Account of the Opening of Two New Buildings.

The Lincln schools opened Monday morning and throngs of children assembled promptly at the various buildings. No reports of attendance were ready to give out by noon. A large proportion of the pupils enrolled last week and had been assigned in advance to the proper building and room. The opening of the new Sarafoga caused considerable redistricting for grade children of the Prescott and Everett and the opening of the Whittier junior high will occasion considerable changes in grouping for those above the sixth grade. A total enrollment of nearly 13,000 is expected before the close of the school year.

ASK FOR BIDS ON GASOLINE

CITY ENGINEER ESTIMATES THE COST AT TWELVE CENTS.

This Price Based on Two Hundred Thousand Gallons, More or Less, for a Few More Than Fifty Cars.

The city is asking for bids on 200,000 galons, more or less, of gasoline to supply the muny tanks for a year. Commissioner Cowgill and City Engineer Erickson estimate the cost at 12 cents a gallon. If 200,000 gallons or anywhere near that amount is used in some fifty odd motor tanks for a year, these vehicles must keep moving. This maximum amount is about 4,000 gallons per vehicle per year. The street department head believes the estimate plenty high. He expects to buy at around ten cents.

Mr. Cowgill figures that the twenty-five vehicles of his several departments will use 75,000 gallons or thereabouts. Such an estimate looms big in comparison with the following figures on actual department gas consumption for a year:

Police	4,000 gallons
Fire	3,630 gallons
Health	2,600 gallons

The water and light departments combined probably do not burn as much as either the fire or police.

The present retail price is 14 1-4 cents. Entrance to the muny station is not presumably distasteful to the several companies. The city will save handling and storage costs. Mr. Cowgill will handle and store but can do it more economically than the dealer. He pays no groud rental. His station will be a modest structure and he will not employ additional help. He now buys at two cents under the market by filling a 500 gallon tank at one time. He expects to save more than the two cents and counts on paying for station, tanks, pump and entire outfit in a year. He estimates the saving at $3,000.

The low bid will be a maximum price. If the price tumbles, thecity will derive the benefit. If the city were to use 200,000 gallons in a year, the total cost of $24,000 based on an estimate, is approximately what the county usually spends in a year for gasoline.

Estimating fifteen miles as the average per gallon for the ordinary motor car, 200,000 gallons would mean 3,000,000 car miles. City vehicles, however, include tractors, trucks and flushers. The big road-dragging tractor uses about twenty-five gallons a day or 6,875 gallons a year, assuming that road work covers 275 days of the year.

Here are the advantages of the muny tank as presented by the street department head:

Standardization of gas and oils for city use.
Keeping check on what each city car uses.
Prevents solicitation by gas dealers.

The question of standardization raises an interesting point. Commissioner Wright suggests that standardized gas for a tractor may not mean standardized gas for the fire department.

"It is possible," he said, "that low-speed gas may be desired for the tractor. For fire fighting apparatus I must have the very highest speed gas for a quick get-away."

The public safety head issues the ultimatum that unless the muny station handles the sort of gas that he must have, he will buy elsewhere. It therefore appears probable that it will not be mandatory upon any department head to go to the muny tank. It does not appear likely that Mr. Cowgill will carry high speed and low speed gas. His two underground tanks will not hold a full car each (he combined they will hold more than one car. Since high-speed and low-speed gas are not shipped in the same tank car, it is difficult to figure how he can handle two grades without increasing the capacity of his tanks.

FULFILLMENT OF PROPHECY

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS SEE IN QUAKE WORLD'S END.

Japanese Disaster and Other Big World Disasters Show That Second Coming of Christ Is Near.

Seventh-day Adventists believe that the second coming of Christ is near and point to recent world events as fulfilling the prophecies of the scriptures. The following statement prepared by W. L. Burgan of the general conference press bureau, is approved as representing the views on this subject of people of that church, by President O. M. John of Union college:

"Seventh-day Adventists see in the terrible calamity that has come to Japan, another sign that the second coming of Christ is hastening on. As terrible as the loss of life has been and the unspeakable suffering that the injured are passing thru, the Adventists point to the words of Christ Himself as a basis for their belief. Jesus said: 'And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations; with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory' Luke 21:25-27.

"In this same prophecy, Jesus declared that 'Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven.' Verses 10 and 11. And in the 28th verse, He says: 'And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh.' 'These things' have been coming to pass a long time, and the records indicate that they are growing more frequent as time passes. The newspapers tell us that thousands of earthquakes have occurred in Japan alone, yet this morning's papers say that this last quake was the greatest that ever occurred there. Surely there is great significance in the Savior's statement that there shall be 'great earthquakes in divers places, and famines and pestilences'

"The awful disaster in Japan makes any human being shudder, yet it is an omen that the day of God is hastening on. There are signs all about us, the words of Christ shall eventually be fulfilled.

"The prophet Jeremiah paints a doleful picture of conditions that are yet coming upon the earth. He says: 'I beheld the earth, and, lo, it was without form and void: and the heavens, and they had no light. I beheld the mountains, and lo, they trembled, and all the hills moved slightly. I beheld, and, lo, there was no man, and all the birds of the heavens were fled. I beheld, and, lo, the fruitful place was a wilderness, and all the cities thereof were broken down at the presence of the Lord, and by his fierce anger. For thus hath the Lord said, The whole land shall be desolate; yet will I not make a full end. For this shall the earth mourn, and the heavens about be black: because I have spoken it, I have purposed it, and will not repent, neither will I turn back from it.' Jer. 4:23-28.

"You will see from these scriptures that the hills will move, the mountains tremble, and all the cities of the earth will be 'broken down at the presence of the Lord, and by his fierce anger.' From these scriptures it is evident that greater calamities will yet come upon hte earth, and earth's inhabitants.

"Seventh-day Adventists are not alarmists, but they do believe the scriptures. They believe that the terrible calamities happening on land and sea are calling men and women to obey God's commandments, and prepare for the day of His vengeance. The Adventists believe the day has arrived when the prophecies telling of conditions that would exist on the earth just prior to Christ's return should be explained, and they believe that there is salvation for every human being who accepts Christ as his personal Saviour, and makes heart preparation for acceptance into His eternal kingdom.

"The apostle John, in the book of GENEVA, Sept. 10.—The Irish free state was unanimously elected today a member of the league of nations.

Irish delegates took their seats on the floor of the assembly and President Cosgrave of the free state made a speech. He began talking in Gaelic but shortly swung into English.

The others swam and were helped back to the float, but Duke, handicapped by the amputation of his right arm and believed to have been stunned against the side of the boat, disappeared.

RECEIVER IS DISSATISFIED

APPEALS TO SUPREME COURT FROM CLAIM ALLOWANCES.

American State Bank of Aurora Involved in Several Big Claims That Receiver Is Disputing.

Transcripts were filed in supreme court Monday in three claims against the defunct American State bank of Aurora that the district court awarded. They total in excess of $21,000.

One of these was a certificate of deposit for $15,000 that the National American Fire insurance company had in the bank when it went under. C. W. Wentz, the head of the bank, also ran an insurance agency and got the company to deposit $15,000 worth of liberty bonds with him. He went to Omaha and there solicited the deposit. When he got the bonds he took them over to a trust company and sold them for $13,704, the market value of them, and deposited the proceeds to the credit of the W. C. Wentz company, of which he was owner and manager and which operated a real estate, loan and insurance agency. He later deposited a part of the proceeds in the bank to its credit.

Receiver Ackerman opposed the claim on the ground that there was a verbal agreement for 6 per cent interest, which would have taken it out from under the guaranty fund, and denied the bank got any benefit from the money. The court below allowed the claim for the market value of the bonds, $13,704, and against the guaranty fund.

Another claim was for $5,537, allowed in favor of the Maryland Casualty company. As agent of the latter Aurora sold to the Chapin-Colegalzier company, that had a big paving contract in Aurora, a surety bond. It paid $5,537 as premium on the bond, and Wentz deposited this in the American State bank to the credit of the Wentz company. The court below said it was a trust fund and that the bank had full knowledge of the fact because Wentz was also the managing officer of the bank as well as of the agency.

The third claim is a dispute whether an overdraft the American State bank made on its account in the City National of Lincoln to the amount of $510 was a claim against the guaranty fund or a general claim. The received said it wasn't, but he lost in the lower court.

SIX OF THEM ARE FAVORED

UNION PACIFIC REPORTS ON ANNUAL PASSES ISSUED.

One Lincoln Man, Head of Wesleyan University, Is on the List Filed With State Railway Commission.

The Union Pacific railroad is the first and so far the only Nebraska road that has taken advantage of the permission given by the last legislature to issue annual passes to ministers and railway Y. M. C. A. secretaries. Its monthly report for July, just filed with the state railway commission, lists the following, in addition to several railway men, as having been given annual passes:

Rev. C. C. Gassell, Methodist, Omaha.
Rev. M. E. Gilbert, Methodist, Kearney.
Rev. L. B. Schreckengast, Methodist, Lincoln.
Rev. John S. Palubricki, Catholic, Omaha.
Rev. Joseph Duhamel, Catholic, Omaha.
C. A. Musselman, traveling secretary, railway Young Men's Christian association, Omaha.

Dr. Schreckengast is vice chancellor and head of Nebraska Wesleyan university.

The Union Pacific is quite liberal in its treatment of eastern railroads. Among the passes listed are several given the employes of roads as far away as the Maine Central.

The largest pass list filed is that of the Burlington. It includes only employes of the road. It consists of 117 typewritten pages and lists about 4,000 trip passes given during the month to men and their wives, daughters and other dependents. One man started to figure out how many passenger trains a month this takes to carry the road's own employes and members of families, largely on pleasure trips, but gave it up when he discovered the varying distances traveled.

COMPLAINS OF HER BUTCHER

Village Housewife Sets State Officers After Dealer of Unpleasant Habits.

Grant Shumway, state superintendent of agriculture and head of the state pure food department, has received complaint from an observing housewife in a small Nebraska town who charges that the village butcher "sleeps in the shop behind the counter, picks his teeth wit his fingers, then scratches his head and then goes to cutting meat."

Because Superintendent Shumway hopes to have one of his inspectors swoop down upon the offending butcher while he "sleeps in his shop," or at least at an opportune moment while he is "picking his teeth," the name of the town is not revealed, other than that it is "somewhere in southeastern Nebraska."

CREMENS CASE TO TRIAL

Man Accused of Stealing Company Auto Files for Continuance—Alleges He Bought Car.

The case of the state against Howard Cremens in which the latter is charged with the crime of larceny as bailee, was called for trial before District Judge Stewart Monday morning. Information against Cremens was filed April 3, in which he is charged with stealing a Ford roadster, the property of the Singer Sewing Machine company, which was in his possession during his employment by the company. Mr. Cremens in his motion for continuance alleges that the car was bought by him for $65 from Mr. Harrett, Lincoln manager of the company. He states that the transaction took place in the Savoy hotel and asks that the court continue the case until his witness may be summoned.

RAISING FUND FOR JAPANESE

LINCOLN PEOPLE WILL HAVE CHANCE TO GIVE.

Downtown Booths Being Prepared to Receive Contributions Wednesday—Public Is Not to Be Solicited.

Everyone who comes downtown Wednesday will have a chance to contribute to the Japanese disaster relief fund being raised by the Red Cross with the backing of the Community Chest. No tags will be sold and no one solicited to give, it was decided Monday at a joint meeting of the Chest and the Red Cross. Booths in the largest stores and hotels, the railroad stations and other places to be selected, will afford everyone an opportunity to give.

Lincoln's quota is $6,000 and part of that sum has already been raised thru the press and by personal work on the part of Red Cross members. Now the whole public is to have a chance to help. Many people have been waiting for some such arrangements to be made, it developed at Monday's meeting.

Mrs. W. W. Whitfield, chairman of the Red Cross committee, will have charge of the booths, and young women from the Junior League will assist her. Louis Horne of the Community Chest, is to provide the booths and also banners with the legend, "Red Cross drive for Japanese relief, under Community Chest auspices—be liberal." O. J. Fee, secretary of the chest, and J. R. Moyer of the Red Cross, will complete the working of two lists of names compiled by the chapter, which are expected to bring in more than $1,000.

Panic ensued in many parts of Calcutta and the terror among the native population was great. When the shock, which was recorded at exactly 3:57 a. m had ended, it was found that no buildings had been seriously damaged.

SEVEN NAVAL CRAFT RUSH TO DESTRUCTION

At Least Score of Seamen Lost Off Pont Arguello, California.

OVER 500 MEN ARE RESCUED

Some Carried Overboard Into Raging Sea.

ONE FIREMAN GOES INSANE

Fog Causes Boats to Pile Up Like Sheep Following Leader, as First Goes to Ruin on Rocks.

PONT ARGUELLO, Sept. 10—Twenty-two men are dead or missing in the wreck of seven destroyers which crashed upon the rocks at Santa Barbara Saturday, it was semi-officially stated today.

One body has been recovered, that of fireman R. A. Conroy.

Those missing and believed dead include:

Fireman Overshiner, R. Grady, H. W. Shipper, Joseph Slimek, Vansheak, John Young, Wade H. Morris, B. F. Rogers, Pearson, Zakerzewski, Kirk.

Seamen Martin, Kirby, Duncan.

Cabin Steward Enrique Torres, Chief Pharmacist Buchanan, Engineman Harrison, Radio Operator Reddock, Coxswain Salzer, Engineman Taylow, Steward Delida.

Twenty-eight are in hospitals suffering serious injuries. Fifty received minor injuries.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.—The pounding waves of the Pacific are slowly breaking up the seven navy destroyers which piled like cordwood upon the jagged rocks of Pont Arguello Saturday night and caused the deaths of between twenty and twenty-five members of the crews. The exact number of sailors drowned cannot be definitely determined.

The sea is running heavy, possibly reflecting with the violence of earthquakes, eruptions and tidal waves from Japan.

Racing full steam ahead at twenty knots thru an impenetrable fog, the destroyers Delphi, Young, Chauncey, Woodbury, Fuller, S. P. Lee and Nicholas crashed on the rocks. Running in formation and believing themselves eight miles off shore the boats piled up like sheep following a leader. Each one steered by the lights of the boat ahead.

They lie today on the treacherous Pont Arguello, north of Santa Barbara where they probably will be completely destroyed.

Only one man, the foreman mate named Conroy of the Delphi has been officially listed as dead by the navy department. His body has been recovered. Nineteen of the Young have not yet been found, it is said. They have been listed as missing.

Thirteen seamen received severe injuries, while half a hundred more were cut and bruised during their rescue after swimming thru jagged rocks.

More than 500 half clothed and unshaven "gobs" and officers saved from the wrecked hulks have been taken from the wild barren point to San Diego. Half dead from exhaustion, exposure and lack of sleep, they lay sprawled on the floor or on the seats of the thirteen train coaches and told the story of their night of terror and of the toll taken of their comrades.

Trapped Like Rats.

The men believe there are twenty dead on the destroyer Young alone. They think their comrades were trapped like rats in the hold of the ship when she went down beneath the surface after the crash.

On the destroyer Delbi—leader of the pack—three men went overboard, according to other members of the crew. One was knocked insensible and carried away on a monster comber which raked the vessel fore and aft.

Another, Fireman Pearson, blinded by oil, went insane. Screaming and fighting, he tore himself away from his mates who attempted to hold him down and leaped to his death in the surf.

A third member of the crew lost his grip on the life line and was washed overboard.

After the Delphi struck the rock it was not more than an instant until the Young rammed up behind her and swung over against her side. The Delphi's propeller, still racing, caught the Young in the bow and aided by a big swell kicked her over. Then the Chauncey piled up.

The commander of the Chauncey had just a flash of warning. He ordered full speed astern when he was coming down a few feet from the others, but it was too late. The Chauncey swung up against the Young and the Young's propeller, in turn, ripped open her side and lifted her high upon the rocks.

The Nicholas, Woodbury and Fuller rushed up behind within a few seconds. The S P. Lee fought against the running waves, but her warning also came too late and she too piled up.

Eleven Others Escape.

The rapid disappearance of lights warned eleven other destroyers of the squadron who were following close behind. They escaped. Because of the proximity of the shore, however, they were unable to do much to help the others.

The Young was the death trap of the flock. With her side and bottom ripped open, she keeled over on her side in a minute and thirty seconds. She lay bottom up and it is believed twenty or more men were caught helpless in a compartment on the lower side, under the water. This was reported by a member of her crew who escaped.

Gobs and officers on the Chauncey, only ten feet away, threw life lines over to the Young and saved many members of her crew who otherwise were sure to have been drowned or smashed to death against the rocks.

The bow of the Delphi was piled high in the crash. Her stern was washed around parallel to a huge rock against which she hammered methodically from minute to minute as each wave crashed.

BIG DAY FOR PICKPOCKETS

OLD SOL WORKS FOR GOOD OF ONE TYPE OF CROOK.

City Council on Lookout to Make Sure That Nobody Puts Over Something of Strongarm Character in City.

The city astronomer advised members of the council Monday to have their candles trimmed and burning and to call their Sherlocks in to make sure that during the gloomy eclipse nothing be put over their heads or under their knees. If any suspicious looking customers showed at the afternoon meeting, plans called for recess during the term of near-darkness.

City police expected to wear high-powered lens over each eye to keep check on pickpockets. Moneyed folks were advised to carry lanterns and broom handles for protection. The big iron door leading to city archives was bolted to prevent theft of paving districts and history of gas case.

The council expected to maintain efficiency to degree of 70 per cent while Old Sol off watch to that extent. City hall janitor polished electric bulbs and re-wicked gold lanterns. When City Clerk Berg read Cowgill resolution calling for 200,000 gallons of gas, one member supposed to interrupt with these words:

"Preposterous. Read it to me again after sun dries out from eclipse bath. You've got too many ciphers."

Police report for year showed more than 3,000 arrests. Because of eclipse, city clerk not required to read entire list.

Ordinance introduced creating paving district on Tenth street, D to B. Resolution orders grading in district 17, Sumner, Seventeenth to Twentieth.

Assessment resolutions involving twenty-two paving, re-paving, alley paving, sewer and water districts, were introduced. These nivolve total expenditures of $64,443.40.

Because of scheduled eclipse, zoning ordinance not brought out. Council has insisted on throwing plenty of light on proposed law. Zoning advisory board concurs.

NEW QUAKES SHAKE JAPAN

ONE SHARP SHOCK FELT AT NOON ON SUNDAY.

Vast Upheaval Probably Continuing Deep in Earth—Tokio Menaced by Epidemics of Typhoid and Dysentery.

TOKIO, Sept. 9.—(Noon) (By radio from Iwaki, Japan, Sept. 10.)—Japan was shaken at noon today (Sunday) by another sharp earthquake.

While it and a series of similiar, tho perhaps lighter shocks which proceeded it during the last few days, added to the terror of the people, it could do little to increase the havoc already wrought.

It was accepted as proof that a vast volcanic upheaval—probably the greatest since the Japan isles were thrown up from the sea—is continuing deep down in the earth.

Danger of epidemics of typhoid and dysentery has become grave.

Relief workers are bending every effort to combat disease. Many refugees are going mad as a result of their experiences.

Twelve foreigners who escaped from Yokohama are domed for the madhouse. Several are already idiots. These twelve were forced to stand helplessly by and hear and se tortures of five children burning to death.

The twelve found physical safety for themselves aboard warships in the harbor.

Government and foreign agencies concentrated on immediate efforts to prevent a threatened shortage of food and to restore comunications, including railroads and telegraphs.

The people frightened and not disheartened, began to have thoughts of their homes, from which they had fled when first earthquakes and then fire struck their deadly blows.

TWO MILLION MEN IDLE

Such Is Outlook for England for Winter—800,000 Youths There Have Never Worked.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—For the fourth time since the end of the war, England faces a "black winter of unemployment."

At Christmas time, 1920, there were just over half a million workless listed on the unemployment exchanges in the British Isles.

One year later the number had increased to 1,706,000.

Last year a decrease of about 400,000 served only to aggravate the plight of the luckless thousands still out of work.

The "army of the unemployed" is pitifully slow to demobolize.

This year the problem is no nearer solution. These idle thousands are supported by the dole, a post war and temporarily intended expedient whereby those who do work support those who do not.

The vicious possibilities of such subsidized though unavoidable loafing is becoming apparant to Britain's leaders.

"It is better," declares J. R. Clynes, a Labor member of Parliament, and admittably a sane and capable economist, "to pay in wages one pound sterling a week for productive, servicable employment than to give away ten or fifteen shillings for absolute idleness."

Clynes estimates the peak of the coming winter's unemployment will find two million men out of work. With their dependents, that means that close to ten million persons will be directly affected by the scarcity of work.

It will cost the government $250,000,000 according to Clynes, to prevent starvation among the workless during the winter.

During the four years of unemployment has grown up a problem that even work for all may not solve.

Eight hundred thousand youths who became of working age in 1920 have never worked. They have attached themselves to some governmental source of substance, or their parents have done it for them, and they are loafing away their life with neither a thought nor a desire for work.

TELLS STORY OF DESTROYERS

Eye Witness Says Fog Was Thick and Air Full of Messages About Freighter Going on Rocks.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.—Coxswain F. Bronski of the Chauncey today told the first eye witness story of how seven naval destroyers piled up on hte rocks of Point Arguella. He said:

"No one saw the lights at the point. The fog was thick as pea soup and the air was so full of messages about a freighter going on the rocks off San Miguel island, a few miles away, that we were unable to pick up radio bearings which we usually use in a fog.

"The first thing we knew the Delphi was on the rocks. We heard her strike with a terrible grating. The Young was right on the Delphi's heels. The latter's propeller helped turn the Young on her side. He went over with a groaning splash.

"Then, before we know it, we were on. Our engines had been reversed, but only for a second. The lights went out and veerything was black, with the fog swirling about us and the water roaring over the rocks under us.

"The Young's propeller kicked over the Chauncey. We went high and dry after what seemed a couple of swirls of the boat. The others piled up rapidly behind us.

"Every gob was on deck in a flash, some of them bringing only their hats. Rescue work started at once. All anyone thought about was getting the other fellow out of the mess. Confusion was everywhere. Men clung to the lines and lines were thrown out to the other vessels.

"Our commander, Captain Booth, was the last man to leave and he was the first in the morning to aid the survivors and to try to get all the boys a bite of food and a cup of coffee."

CRIME COMMISSIONER ROBBED.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Edwin W. Sims, former head of the Chicago crime commission, was summoned to his office at 1 a. m. by a decoy telephone call. When he returned burglars had ransacked his home.

Your Problems

BY MARY GORDON

Dear Mary Gordon: I've been watching your column constantly for someone to come to you with a problem similar to my own, but no one has, altho "Ruined Girl" was very close to it.

Mary, I've lost all faith in everything. In myself and all. I've lived a double life for five years, and now when I want to be square with the world I can't.

I'll have to start at the beginning so you'll understand. I started out wrong. I was wild about dancing and my greatest delight was to make some man believe I cared for him and then throw him away. Why? I don't know, Mary. But now, after years of that kind of a life, I've met the real man. A good clean boy who loves me a thousand times more than I'm worthy to be loved. Oh, I could be so happy if that old past were'nt always lurking back there threatening to ruin my happiness. And, Mary, I haven't even faith enough in myself to feel that I'll always love him as I do now.

I'm afraid I'll slip back sometime, to that old life and want to see him hurt like I did the others. It seems to me some times that there are two of me, the one me wants to do what's right and the other keeps pulling toward the wrong. I don't want to drag this boy's life down to where mine is, but I feel like I'm doing it right along.

Should I give him up, Mary? It would mean the end of everything for me and I'm afraid it would for him. But perhaps that's the way I'm supposed to pay for all the heartaches I've caused in the world. I do so want to be good, and there are times when I'm alone, and trying to figure out my terrible jumble of a life, that the better me conquers and for a while I feel that I can go ahead and be worth while. Then that old faithless feeling comes back and I'm simply a— Nobody.

A. Perhaps this man's love has been sent you for your own redemption, instead of as a vengeance of fate. I believe you need something of the sort to guide you back into the path you have forsaken.

Judging by the place from which your letter was mailed, I suppose the young man must know your story. If he does not, since you are so unsure of yourself, he should be told, so that he could help you.

Strengthen your willpower in every way you can. Try doing without something you want. When you find your worse self in possession, resolutely frighten it away, by thinking of something else. Tell yourself, "I am going to make a success of my life; I will turn my back on the old faithless self."

It is your own battle, you know; no one but yourself can fight. Others can help and encourage you, but they cannot do the work. The thought of your influence in the young man's life should be a powerful upward pull, too.

Stop thinking of yourself as being fickle. Remember that every time you hurt someone else, or break faith with them, it injures you far, far more than it does them, for it weakens your character.

M. W. S.: Human nature, my dear, is the answer to your question. Some day, when you are older, you will understand. No one can tell you any more than that.

Dear Mary Gordon: Please answer the following questions:

1. When introduced to a person, how should one acknowledge the introduction?
2. After riding in a public elevator should one thank the person running it?
3. Is it proper for a girl to ask a boy to correspond if she knows him well but does not get to see him often?
4. We are girl chums and while attending a fair two of our girl friends "snubbed" us. We want to get revenge by not speaking until they apologize. Would this be correct? We have "bushels" of friends, both boys and girls.
5. Is bobbed hair going out of style? What is the latest style for hairdressing for hair which is not bobbed? Mary, I've got my phrases slightly mixed, but please excuse them. Thanking you in advance.

Two Chatterboxes.

1. Say, "How do you do?" with a pleasant smile, or "I am very glad to know you."
2. No.
3. He would probably think she was "running after him" if she asked him to write to her.
4. Getting revenge would place you in the same category as they, wouldn't it? Can't you be big enough to forget it and speak as well-mannered girls should?
5. Bobbed hair is still popular, altho the hairdressers in the east appear to be attempting to force it out.
6. The braided ear bun effect is said to be the newest in hair dressing.

Dear Mary Gordon: We are six girls in our teens who wish to ask advice about some questions that have been perplexing us. They are:

1. Is a kiss on the lips sacred?
2. What age should girls be before they accept boys' company?
3. Is it wrong for a girl who is not engaged (but is in love) to kiss a boy good night when he asks her to?
4. How late should your boy friend stay when he calls? Six Teens.

A. Not unless it is supported by an enduring friendship or an engagement.

2. About seventeen.
3. It is unwise.
4. Ten-thirty is plenty late enough for him to stay.

Left-Over Vegetables.

No left-over vegetables should be thrown away. Even a tablespoonful will do for the soup or omelet and in combination with other vegetables will make a delicious salad.

Beans.

Cold string beans make an appetizing salad if mixed with French dressing or a sour cream dressing. If they are served plain or with butter the first day they will be relished in a cream sauce the following day. Lima beans make a good macedoine salad, combined with carrots, beets and parsley mixed with French dressing on a bed of shredded lettuce. Pressed thru a colander and mixed with a spoonful each of molasses, vinegar and butter and seasoning, left over white and lima beans make excellent croquettes.

Peas.

Just a few left-over peas will do nicely to add to the omelet and it will not take a large quantity to make a palatable cream of pea soup. Combined with cooked carrots they can be creamed or with the addition of a cream sauce and an egg will make good croquettes.

Spinach.

Spinach can be reheated in a little butter, sprinkled with flour and well mixed. Spread a tablespoon on each slice of toasted bread in the form of a border. Break an egg in center; season and bake in oven until eggs are set.

Tomatoes.

Stewed tomatoes can be combined with macaroni or rice and grated cheese to make a delicious scalloped dish. Left-over tomatoes poured over a slice of toast and a poached egg on top will make a good breakfast dish. And a tomato omelet is also a good way to use left-over tomatoes.

Schools Open in Jefferson.

Robinson; Steele City, Vernon Cox; Endicott, Walter Lenker; Harbine, Anna Arnold; Plymouth, Matilda Steckelberg. Wages in the towns are slightly reduced and wages in the rural districts are greatly reduced.

MAY EXTEND MARTIAL LAW

Troops May Be Sent to McIntosh County, Oklahoma, If Klan Defies Walton's Order.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Sept. 10.—Troops will be sent to McIntosh county, Oklahoma, if necessary to enforce orders of Gov. J. C. Walton that the Ku klux klan must not hold masked parades or appear in public masked, it was announced at the executive's office today.

The klan announced an initiation ceremony would be held near Checotah, Ok., Thursday night, despite the governor's order.

Informed of the governor's demand that the klan unmask, N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the state organization, said:

"There is only one power in the world that can make the klan unmask. That is the imperial wizard, who, as far as I know, has not issued any such order and is not contemplating it."

Aldrich Blake, executive counsellor to Governor Walton, who has direct charge of the executive's fight on floggings, said:

"Troops will go to McIntosh county to arrest anyone disobeying the order. We have reports of several places in the state contemplating violating the governor's instructions and they'll be taken care of."

This statement was regarded as significant, in view of the fact that it was believed practically certain in official circles here today that martial law would be declared for McIntosh county. And the governor has announced that if military rule is extended to another county, it will blanket the state.

THOUSANDS IN OPEN BURNED

SURVIVORS OF QUAKE ARE VICTIMS OF FLAMES.

One Man Out of 32,000 Persons Living After Flames Seared Bodies of Screaming Crowd.

By Shiro Takata, Assistant Foreign Editor Osaka Mainichi.

OSAKA, Sept. 10.—A story of how 32,000 survivors of the Tokio earthquake were burned alive in a huddled, screaming, struggling mass at Honjo wsa told today by the lone survivor, singed and nearly crazed, who dragged himself to Osaka.

The man told a tale of unparalleled horror in what was probably the worst tragedy of the quake:

"At 3 p. m. on the first day of the earthquake (Saturday, September 1), I rushed with thousands of others for an open space of about fifteen acres near the Ryoogoku station in the Honjo district of Tokio," the man, still shaking from fatigue and fright and the delirium thru which he had passed, began.

"Army stores formerly were kept in this space, which was surrounded by houses. We thought we would be safe there in the open.

"I was vainly hunting for my parents among the thousands who were milling about, when suddenly I felt a scorching wind from the eastern edge of the open space.

"I noticed that many houses there were burning.

"The flames were driven by the wind into the space where thousands of us stood, crowded helplessly.

"Screams arose as those about me felt their faces and flesh seared by the fire.

"Everyone tried to make their way to the western side of the compound, which was already full. There they were, packed in, thirty-two thousand of them, unable to move further.

"Then flames broke out there and the crowds on the edge were trampled to death. Cries and screams filled the air in deafening profusion.

"Then a terrible whirlwind of flames swept the compound, devouring humans as it had the houses.

"I was forced back to the eastern edge, then providentially I reached the edge of a big pool.

"Into this pool I plunged, seizing a thick bedquilt which was swirled in my direction by the high wind. Almost subconsciously I wrapped myself in this.

"The shriek of the victims was incessant. Hundreds were being burned alive at each caprice of the wind. The flames approached me and so intense was the heat that my soaked quilt was instantly dried up.

"I jumped again into the pool, which was also drying up, and rolled up and down on the muddy bottom.

"Occasionally the tortured crowd would open and I could catch glimpses of the others farther away being burned or trampled to death, the baggage they had brought with them feeding the flames.

"I fell delirious with the heat and horrors all about me. It was nine o'clock at night when I recovered consciousness.

"On every side of me were acres of burned bodies. The stench from these was terrible.

"I was the lone survivor among the charred dead. I sought vainly again for my parents and my sisters, but all the bodies looked alike, burned beyond recognition.

"In the morning I looked again, in vain. Finally the soldiers got me out, or I could never have done so."

Plague Is Feared.

The great dread of Japanese officialdom is that the plague, reported in many instances in Tokio and Yokohama, may spread.

Local Red Cross organizations are making desperate efforts to mobilize drugs and sanitary materials thruout Japan to combat the first signs of cholera.

Relief work is being pressed at redoubled speed in an effort to rid the larger cities of conditions that would further the spread of disease. The last of thousands of corpses of victims of the great quake of September 1 and the fires that followed are being incinerated in huge pyres.

The damage in Tokio as well as that in Yokohama is proving incalculable.

Some today estimated the total loss at 5,000,000,000 yen, but this officially was admitted to be purely speculative.

Finance Minister Inouye stated it may be necessary to float a foreign loan for the purpose of reconstruction. He added it is premature to discuss details of this before the extent of the destruction is known.

Yokohama lies in utter ruins; buildings mere heaps of brick and charred wood across the streets that in some instances are almost unrecognizable; the harbor docks burned and shattered; smaller shipping a flattened, tangled mass for hundreds of yards up the beaches; the bluff section looking as tho some great plow had uprooted its houses and hurled them over the cliffs.

Tokio in parts suffered as severely; its great system of overhead wires for trolley services and communications tangled everywhere among the ruins. It will be many weeks before an accurate estimate of the total loss can be made.

With grim Japanese troopers guarding the city streets, relief workers in increasing numbers are busy relieving the suffering of those who escaped from the disaster only to find themselves destitute and homeless. The prince regent, Hirohito, works in his shirt sleeves among the relief squads; he eats the unhulled rice doled out to the refugees and in some other ways shares their hardships. Despite the pleadings of his staff, he has refused to leave the city.

The emperor of Japan has presented the diplomatic corps with several hundred wild ducks, presumably for food.

While struggling to raise her stricken cities from their ashes, Japan welcomed reports of foreign aid on the way.

The Osaka Mainichi, in an editorial today said:

"The sympathy foreign nations are showing for Japan is unparalleled and amazing to the Japanese."

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR BABIES

Should Be Able to Listen to Watch at Six Months and Tap Bell at Twelve.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—First thing you know they'll be trying Edison's questionnaires on the babies!

Simple mentality tests, practised on infants from six to fifteen months old, show that a normal child should be able to do the following:

Listen to the watch ticking at six months.

Take a few swallows out of a cup held to its lips at seven months.

Pick up a piece of sugar or a crumg using the forefinger and thumb, at nine months.

Tap a bell or hear it ring at twelve months and put a cork in a bottle at fifteen months.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Evanston says so. The local chapter has made public a report of Dr. Bird S. Baldwin, director of the child welfare research station at Iowa state university, which describes mental tests for babies and children.

"When is a child old enough to do things for itself?" asks Dr. Baldwin "Can a baby of three years take off and put on its own wraps? Can it carry its bottle full of milk, and wash and empty the bottle, put away its toys, start a phonograph and play agreeably with other children; in short can it within its own little world do things itself?"

"Children at the parental laboratory can. In the friendly, interesting environment of the school, the children become confident, active little personalities, free from the fears of restraint which have led psychologists to say that young children are not sociable beings.

"Tests have been constructed for measuring good citizenship. This is the day of intelligent tests. Mental measurement is being used more and more widely in solving the problems of the school, the court and the factory, but character measurement has been neglected.

"Obviously, a person may be highly intelligent and still be a useless or even a dangerous citizen, while a person of only average intelligence may be a valuable citizen, because moved by social enthusiasm and altruism. The problem in which the research station is interested is how to develop altruism and good citizenship in childhood."

HOME CONDITIONS POOR

Officials of Chicago Union Attempt to Unionize Employes of Packing Plants.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Declaring that home environment of Chicago packing house workers is a "blot on present-day civilization," officials of the foodstuff workers' industrial union today launched an attempt to unionize employes of the seventeen great plants here.

Packer employes are now represented by "company unions," known as the "assembly plan of representation." James E. Carroll, secretary of the foodstuff workers' union, declared that the workers are not content with this system.

"The condition of the workers is appalling," Carroll asserted. "We have found as many as ten people living in one room because of the low wages they receive. In many instances we have found that children are deserted during the day because both the mother and father are forced to work to obtain a living wage.

"Wages in the meat industry are far below those of workers in other lines of work. Women receive far less than the men, altho they do practically the same work."

Carroll asserted that a 'spy system" exists to combat unionism in the larger plants and that if a "company union" representative tried to fight in behalf of his fellow workers he would be discharged.

TOKIO STRUCK BY A FEVER

U. S. AMBASSADOR WOODS WIRES STATE DEPARTMENT.

Urges Million Dollars Be Placed to Credit of Relief Committee Workers Now in Japan.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—An epidemic of fever has broken out in Tokio, according to a wireless message from U. S. Ambassador Woods at Tokio, to the state department, picked up here. Woods urged that a million dollars be placed immediately to credit of relief committee workers in Japan.

STATE ROAD FUNDS ARE ALREADY SPENT

Officials Resist Suit of Bridge Company to Collect, on Grounds of No Money Available.

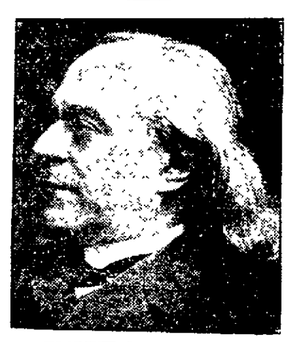

That all state funds available for road building during the past biennium have already been spent, with the exception of certain federal aid funds which have been advanced by the state which as it comes in may be used in paying back bills due contractors, is the contention set forth by the attorney general's office representing State Auditor George Marsh and Secretary of State Charles Pool in suit filed by the Western Bridge and Construction company to compel these officials to approve claims for work finished previous to July 1.

The suit filed by the Western Bridge and Construction company involves a claim of $1,805 but is considered as a test suit to decide whether or not claims of contractors aggregating approximately $420,000 for work finished in the past biennium must be paid out of state funds appropriated for road work during the present biennium.

In the attorney general's petition, prepared by Assistant Attorney General George Ayers, denial is made that the vouchers submitted by the contractors have been approved by the state department of finance, and it is declared that the appropriation made for road work for the biennium ending July 1 of this year has been exhausted and that no funds are available for paying claims for work done during that period. The attorney general, however, does state that there are certain federal aid funds due the state of Nebraska for funds the state advanced on federal aid work during the past biennium and to which the contractors are entitled.

As these funds come in they will be applied on contracts in the order they are due, but further than that the attorney general declares that the state cannot legally pay the pending claims.

De Pachmann, Russian, admits that he is the greatest pianist living

"Nothing could be finer or more superb than what I play," he said. "It is marvelous. When I hear what I play I say 'It is finished—a perfect thing. Thank God!'"

Coming for his second trip to America, De Pachmann said it was not until he was seventy years old that he had learned the real method of playing. He is now seventy-five. He demonstrated his method on a whist table in a cabin of the Majestic, showing how his wrists became stiff tho while his fingers moved smoothly over the keys.

TO DISCUSS TAX REMISSION

N. M. Sommerville Will Talk to Taxpayers at Lindell Hotel Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.

UNIVERSITY PLACE, Neb., Sept. 10—To the Editor: Hon. C. E. Matson, county attorney, very politely refuses to participate in a joint public discussion of either of his two expensive (to the tax payers) opinions, or legal advise to the Lancaster county board of equalization, July 2, 1923, by which more than $2,000,000 worth of good valuable personal property is exempted from taxation. (This opinion will be threshed out in District court, Sept. term. No. 422.'Law'(?) or Equity docket.); the other expensive opinion is the one by which $5,628.42 (taxes, personal, 1920, December 31.) delinquent November 1, 1921, with accrued interest to August 29, 1922) was remitted to the Bankers Life Insurance Company of Lincoln, Neb., (a corp.). The undersigned will discuss the latter "opinion" Tuesday September 11, 7:30 p. m. at the Lindell hotel convention hall. Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer come if you are interested. O by the way do you usually have your delinquent taxes remitted?

FOG MAY RUIN ECLIPSE PLAN

SCIENTISTS MAY BE UNABLE TO TAKE PHOTOGRAPHS.

If Mist Persists, Only Pictures Taken by Army and Navy Aviators Above the Clouds Will Be Obtained.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 10.—Fog, which has caused two sea disasters over the week and, threatened today to ruin the plans of a thousand world famous scientists who gathered to take the most extensive observations on record of the total eclipse of the sun, visible in this region shortly before noon.

With instruments worth hundreds of thousands of dollars trained at the heavens, dawn came with a thick fog covering the coast. The weather bureau holds forth hope that the grey mist as on previous morning will be dispelled before 11:30 when the observations are scheduled to start. therwise it is probable that only photographs obtained here will be those taken far above the clouds by army and navy aviators who will be equipped with the most modern instruments.. Some of the pictures will be taken at an altitude of four miles.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 10.—The sun became visible today at 9:30, two hours before observations of the total eclipse were scheduled to start. Fog cleared and scientists believed they would have a clear view of the phenonemon.

GHOSTLY SOLDIER WIPED OUT.

BATH, England.—(By Mail.)—Bath Abbey's famous ghostly soldier has been wiped out. Some months ago a curious outline of a full-kitted soldier struggling under the weight of his pack began to take form on the dank walls of the abbey. The fame of the manifestation drew hundreds of visitors daily. The abbey authorities decided to treat him as they would any other spots, and had him rubbed out. Mystics expect him to return.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

SPANISH WAR MEN HOLD STATE MEET

Veterans From Many Points Gather at Arbor Lodge for Picnic, and Appoint Committee On the State Convention.

Three hundred members of the Nebraska department of United Spanish War Veterans and their families, from many sections of the state gathered Sunday at Arbor Lodge, Nebraska City, for a picnic and speaking program. One of the results of the meeting was the appointment of a committee to ask the state department of the organization to hold a state convention of the order on flag day, next June, at Morton's park.

Speaking took place from the east veranda of the mansion. Otto W. Meier, of Lincoln, presided. Among the speakers were Senator Charles Smrha of Mulligan, past department commander; Col. J. H. McClay and Frank D. Eager of Lincoln; Judge Paul Jessen of Nebraska City and R. C. James of Falls City. They dwelt mainly on the fortune of the state in acquiring Morton's park as a state property, and also spoke on the life and work of J. Sterling Morton, founder of the park.

Other members who were present with their families were: Will McClay, J. H. North, George Ludden, O. E. Sincebaugh, J. L. Cooper, A. B. Woelhaf, August Johnson and R. N. White of Lincoln; and L. H. Warner, past department commander, of Geneva. Among prominent Nebraska City members who received the visitors were Judge Jessen, A. B. Wilson and O. G. Leidig. The committee appointed to ask that the state convention be held at Nebraska City are O. W. Meier, Judge Jessen and Senator Smrha. Among those present were R. Bjorkman and family of Lincoln.

ADAMS COUNTY IS WINNER

Took First Place in Judging Contest at Fair Instead of Clay County.

A correction in the results of the Dairy Judging contest open to Dairy Calf club members at the state fair last week gives the Adams county team the right to uphold the name and honor of Nebraska at the judging contest at the national dairy show October 6 to 13. Clay county was previously announced at the winner. As corrected the ranking of the teams are Adams county, 2785; Clay county, 2760; Webster county, 2660; Buffalo county, 2560, and Dodge county, 2465.

Interest and competition in this contest was keen because of the trip to the national dairy show at Syracuse, New York, offered the winner by the Omaha National bank thru Walter W. Head, president. The same team must give a demonstration while at the show. In order to win the Adams county team had to place first in judging Holsteins and second in both Jerseys and Ayrshires.

Jessie Yost was high individual of the contest with a score of 1020 of a possible 1200 points. She led the five teams in judging both Holsteins and Jerseys and was third in Ayrshires. Floyd Schroeder of Buffalo county stood second with 975. William Arndt of Webster county was third with 955. Raymond Nixon and Burnard Nelson of Clay county were fourth and fifth respectively.

Clarence Bierman and Carl Brown the other two members of the Adams county team ranked sixth and tenth. This team comes from the Lion's Dairy Calf club of Hastings, the club that sent the winning team to the fair last year. Jessie Yost has been in the club two years. She is a junior in the Hastings high school and was a member of their stock judging team in the contest held at the agricultural college the week of farmers fair. In the show ring, she took first last year in the open ring with her Jersey heifer. This year her heifer stood third in the Boys and Girls club class. Carl Brown and Clarence Bierman have never been in a state contest before. They will stage the club demonstration, "How to Care for Milk," when they reach the national dairy show.

The teams judged four classes of Jerseys, two of Ayrshires and three of Holsteins and gave their reasons for placing three classes. The high individual placed but two of the nine classes right but was consistently high in other placing and in reasons.

SCHOOLS NEED TEACHERS

Superintendent Matzen Receives Reports of Vacancies From County Superintendents.

State Superintendent J. M. Matzen has a revised list of vacancies in schools which he has sent to county superintendents in the hope that teachers out of employment may be given positions. There are thirty-two vacancies in the state not heretofore reported, according to reports of county superintendents. Last year 14,140 teachers were employed in Nebraska. Teachers must possess the proper certificate to teach. No emergency certificates will be issued by the state superintendent because there is a surplus of qualified teachers in the state.

MERE MENTION

Monday was the date set for the electrocution of Sol Wesley and Le Roy Mauldron, convicted of first degree murder, but their sentences were stayed by an appeal to the supreme court. They were convicted of the murder of Mr. Deerson while attempting to rob an Omaha grocery store. Both are colored. They were held at the Douglas county jail, but are now at the state penitentiary.

Jay Williams played a saxophone solo in addition to the regular program and also played two encores. Charley Prokop played a baritone solo and also responded to encores.

Thompson, jr., who is attending him at the Lincoln Sanitarium. The truck in which Mr. Stephenson was riding was being driven by his son, Harry L. Stephenson. Another auto with glaring light approached them on the road, and the Stephenson vehicle was overturned when the driven was blinded.

MARTEL MAN FOUND DEAD IN HIS YARD

Joseph, Seventy-seven, Thought to Have Succumbed From Getting Overheated While Cutting Weeds.

Joseph Sels, seventy-seven years old, was found dead in a patch of weeds at his home at Martel about 6 p. m. Sunday. The discovery of the dead man was made by his step-son, Mr. Beaumont. It is thought that he died from becoming overheated while cutting weeds Saturday morning.

He was last seen at about 9 o'clock in the morning Saturday, cutting weeds with a scythe in his yard. His son visited his house Sunday evening and finding it locked, a search was started. He had laid the scythe down on the ground where he had been working and had walked about fifteen feet, where he fell. The key to the house door was found in one of his hands and he had evidently started for the house. It is thought that he had been dead about thirty-six hours. The body is being held at Castle, Roper & Matthews.

MILFORD GIRL IS KILLED IN ACCIDENT

Miss Freda Gausman Meets Instant Death When Car in Which She Is Riding Collides With Another Near Milford.

Miss Freda Gausman, sixteen, met instant death, Miss Marie Schultz of Garland was seriously injured and Henry Ficken suffered minor bruises when an automobile in which they were riding collided with another machine three miles north of Milford at 3 p. m. Sunday. Miss Gausman was thrown clear of the wreckage and sustained a crushed skull. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gausman who live about five miles northeast of Milford. Miss Schultz was taken to a hospital at Seward.

The Buick car in which Miss Gausman was riding was driven by Henry Ficken. They were driving south on the D. L. D. highway and a Ford, driven by Bert Miller of near Utica, was going east on a road that intersects the D. L. D. highway. The two cars came together with such force that both were wrecked and both turned over. The driver of the Ford escaped unhurt.

Miss Gausman was attended by Dr. H. J. Wertman who found upon examination that death probably was instantaneous. Her body was taken to the undertaking parlors at Milford. Both drivers claim that they were not going over twenty miles an hour when the accident happened. They did not see the approaching cars until too late to prevent an accident.

TO CELEBRATE AT KEARNEY

Semi-Centennial Anniversary of the Town to Be Observed With Parade, Programs and Circus.

KEARNEY, Neb., Sept. 9.—The fiftieth anniversary of this city will be celebrated September 11, 12 and 13 with an historical parade, an Indian program, a three-ring circus, style show, barbecue, and a $1,500 fireworks display, according to plans that have been perfected.

During the past month invitations have been sent to practically every former Kearney citizen to return and join in the celebration. Indications are that almost every state in the union will be represented in this city during the celebration. In connection with the other program pictures of old settlers, caught by the camera thirty years ago, will be flashed on a screen. The style show will present the development of styles in the past half century.

Why be Feeble?

ADVANCING years should not mean the approach of a period of dependency—of crutches and canes—of worry, care and fatigue!

Don't dread the days ahead! Be prepared to grapple with the henchmen of Old Age—with rheumatism—with undermined health—with feebleness. The system that is free from impurities—through which rich red blood tingles need not worry about advancing years. Enlist the aid of S. S. S.—the builder of red blood cells—to fight off the infirmities of Old Age.

With the aid of S. S. S. when you reach this stage of life the nerve power that has been built up by ever increasing blood cells—the vim and vigor of youth that you possess will capably enable you to enjoy the advantages of passing years, while others less fortunate are feeble and dependent.

S. S. S. for nearly a century has been serving as a valuable and time honored assistant in the fight for hale and hearty Old Age. It is made only of pure vegetable ingredients and is sold at all good drug stores. The large size bottle is the more economical.

S.S.S. Makes You Feel Like Yourself Again

COOK USED LEAD ARSENATE

Wymore Woman Noted That Cooking Looked Queer and Discovered Mistake Before Party.

WYMORE, Neb., Sept. 9.—Mrs. Z. K. Brown, of this city, used arsenate of lead under the impression that it was flour, in some cooking she prepared for a farewell party for Mrs. E. S. Frederick, but discovered the poison before she served the dishes. Her ten-year-old daughter, Edith, "licked the pan" of cake batter, and became sick with cramps and nausea. She is out of danger after having been attended by physicians.

Mrs. Brown noticed that the bread did not bake properly. She also observed that the cake was soggy, and that the fried chicken smothered in flour did not brown. The daughter declared that the batter tasted queer. Investigation disclosed that a paper bag containing arsenate of lead, a poison, had been mistaken for a paper bag of flour.

Mrs. James Watts, a neighbor, had asked Mrs. Brown to bake some bread for her, and in return gave her a paper bag of flour. This bag of flour was placed in the cupboard beside the poison.

The cooking was buried for fear chickens would find it. The party was held as scheduled after a complete new baking.

LOCAL RED CROSS TO APPEAL FOR JAP AID

Representatives Will Meet Community Chest Officials Monday to Ask Permission to Make a Drive.

A meeting of the board of directors of the local Red Cross was held Sunday at 10 a. m. for the purpose of discussing means of raising the $3,600 necessary to fill Lincoln's quota of $6,000 for Japanese relief. At the meeting the need of an emergency fund in the community chest was brought out, since it was found that all the organizations were so closely budgeted that none is able to contribute. Mrs. C. F. Ladd, vice president of the local Red Cross, called the meeting and presided. Louis Horn, secretary of the community chest, was at the meeting.

A committee consisting of Mrs. W. W. Whitfield, Miss Edwina Meaney, secretary of the Red Cross, and Thomas Woods, treasurer, was appointed to meet W. A. Selleck, O. J. Fee and Louis Horn, of the community chest, Monday morning, to ask permission to make a drive for the necessary funds for Japanese relief. This drive cannot be held under present agreements, without permission of the community chest.

About $3,000 has been raised of the needed fund. Thomas Woods and J. R. Moyer have been soliciting money from individuals and firms, and individuals have sent money to the Red Cross thru The State Journal. All the churches are being appealed to, and many ministers have promised to help with the work of raising money.

Gravel Streets of Ceresco.

CERESCO, Neb., Sept. 9.—A few weeks ago, the citizens of Ceresco turned out and gravelled the streets thru the village. The gravel was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Pearson, from their farm near Ceresco. Eleven trucks, thirty-one wagon teams and about 150 men and boys helped. Two hundred and sixty-seven loads of gravel were dumped and levelled on three blocks to a depth of two inches. Mr. Pearson lives two miles north of Ceresco where the gravel was mined. The ladies and school children served dinner to the workers. The gravel is being well packed now, and in a few weeks the streets will be in splendid condition.

The New Man at the Helm.

New York Times: The ship of state has lost one captain but sails forward serenely under the command of another. It is saying only what everybody is saying to remark that the bearing of President Coolidge in these first critical days has greatly helped in reassuring and steadying public sentiment. His few utterances and all his acts have been conceived in a perfect sense of propriety. His proclamation in connection with the death of President Harding was unexceptional in taste and shot thru with genuine and appropriate emotion. And the calm and quiet way in which the new president has set about in discharge of his official duties is precisely what the country would have desired to see in a man assuming the presidency under such tragic circumstances, and is full of good augury for the administration upon which President Coolidge is now setting out with the best wishes and the bright hopes of all Americans.

NEBRASKA NEWS.

Nebraska City—John Ingram of Talmage, who has purchased coupons issued by the late Meredian Oil company, from persons who subsribed for stock in the concern, has entered suit for $2,500 and interest from 1921 against the Nebraska Oil company, successors to the Meredian, that has acquired its properties, and attachments have been made upon all property in the county owned by the concern. It is alleged the Meredian company sold coupons for $500 each, claiming to use the money for erection and stocking of oil stations in different parts of the county. The company failed, and it is alleged the Nebraska company, that took over its interests, failed to make good the discounts promised all holders of coupons, on price of gas and oil sold.

Nebraska City—Notice of approval of the federal government to construct a federal aid highway thru Arbor Lodge station, has just been received in this city. The new highway will be a hard surfaced road of about three-quarters of a mile. It will be completed before winter ,and will avoid two dangerous railroad crossings on the Omaha road.

He has paralysis of the right arm, and when he falls down he cannot rise without help. Doctors say it is possible that a bump on the head some time in the past, could have caused the present trouble.

Wymore.—Miss Edne Gminder, living between here and Blue Springs, has gone to South Dakota, where she will teach school the coming year. She is the one, who a year ago, was returning from her school at Hickman, in Lancaster county, driving her auto, when it tipped over four miles north of Blue Springs, badly injuring her.

As he stepped from the engine his leg appeared to give way and he fell under the engine. According to Mr. Kent no blame whatever is attached to the engineer, Grant Engreen, who is a brother-in-law of Mr. Amack. Mr. Engreen and Mr. Amack had worked together for three and one-half years.

ARGUE AS MAN DIES.

OMAHA, Sept. 10.—Relatives of D. Marabitto, in a serious condition at Lord Lister hospital, created such a disturbance over disposition of the dying man's property that police were called this morning. While the argument was at its height the patient died, according to police.

Sergeant Fee and his squad ejected the crowd without making arrests.

Marabitto was struck by an automobile truck while at his work as a street cleaner for the street car company last week.

Norfolk Men Plan Expedition to Search for Buried Treasure in South Dakota Bad Lands

NORFOLK, Neb., Sept. 10.—Jim Bird, member of the Omaha Indian tribe in Thurston county, Neb., honorably discharged from the American army as scout during the battles with the Sioux Indians, wants another chance to find four sacks of nuggets which he declares he and two Santee scouts buried under a tree in the bad lands of South Dakota forty years ago. A number of Norfolk men interested in the old Indian's story are planning to fit up an expedition to locate the gold.

Eight years ago Indian Agent Monroe, who is now agent of the Cheyenne agency, fitted up an expedition to find the gold but Scout Bird declares he was taken into the bad lands in an automobile and lost his bearings. He wants a horse and plenty of time for the second expedition and declares he will find the gold.

The old scout who is past eighty years of age now, declares he is not after the gold from a selfish point of view. He has plenty of money, government allotments to his family bringing him into wealth astimated at $100,000. He says he wants a chance to scout around and find the tree and the gold in order to prove his story is true. He says he wants that done before he passes on to the happy hunting grounds.

Federal agents from the Omaha Indian agency believe Scout Bird's story and they are among those who are encouraging the fitting up of an expedition to hunt for the gold nuggets.

The story told by Scout Bird is a very thrilling one He declares that with two Santee Indian scouts, he became separated from the soldiers who were fighting the Sioux. The three scouts were trailed by hostile Indians and wandered off into the bad lands where they were in hiding for some days. In the wanderings thru the canyons, they came upon four Mexican prospectors who, believing they were attacked, fired on the scouts, who in turn, fired upon the prospectors, killing them. The scouts found four sacks of gold in the camp of the Mexicans, most of the gold being in nugget form Each sack was so heavy that it was hard to lift with one hand.

The scouts dug a tunnel under a tree and buried the gold. They feared discredit upon themselves if they told of the killing of the Mexicans and they kept the incident secret. The two Santee scouts died and about eight years ago Scout Bird told his story to an Indian police officer on the Omaha reservation who in turn told the story to Agent Monroe. Then Monroe fitted up the expedition which failed to get the gold.

"I am an old man," says Jim Bird. "My eyesight is not so good as it used to be. We made that trip into the bad lands in an automobile I could not get my bearings I wanted a horse and plenty of time to hunt around and get my bearings. I know I can find the place. Give me a horse and a little time and I will find it."

Scout Bird has drawn a map from memory of the place where the gold was buried. The tree under which the nuggets are hidden is on the bank of a creek. Bird is willing to give anyone the necessary information to find the gold, but he wants his story proven true and he is willing to start out on an expedition at any time.

BOY'S REFORMS FAIL.

KINSTON, N. C., Sept. 10.—"They wouldn't give me time enough to inaugurate all of the reforms I would like to introduce to this jazzy town," was the only complaint of Person Nicholson, seventeen years old, who acted as mayor for a day of this town of 14,000 population. "They didn't give me time to do anything for the town," Nicholson protested. "I'd like to see hooch and petting parties and some other things eliminated. I would like to see the police force dressed like Nicaraguan generals." Nicholson's only act as mayor was to increase the speed limit to twenty-five miles an hour, after he had been elected by other high school students to run the city for a day.

Credit a Mutual Convenience

This is the third of a series of advertisements to encourage the prompt payment of bills and to stimulate interest in maintenance of a good credit record.

The retail store in opening an account with you, has two things in mind: First, the convenience to you. Second, the convenience to the store. It is intended to be a mutual arrangement. Your charge allows you the privilege of paying once each month, rather than for individual purchases. This arrangement saves you the trouble and annoyance of writing a check or paying cash each time you buy.

Your part of the bargain implies prompt payment of the account when the statement is rendered. When the merchant carries out his part of the agreement, it is not fair to allow your account to become overdue.

If your account is paid promptly, a credit arrangement is a convenient and satisfactory way for the merchant to handle your business without extra expense. If your account is slow it places a burden upon the merchant which he should not be asked to carry. Aside from this, your CREDIT is impaired. Isn't it better to plan your finances so that you can pay your bills promptly and do your part in making the credit arrangement mutually beneficial.

MR. AARD-VARK'S STRANGE STORY

"WELL," laughed the queer-looking creature as Happy Giggles and Dotty entered his pen and sat down on a stone, "so you've never seen anything like me before? It's funny—"

"I don't think it's funny!" Dotty interrupted. "For Happy Giggles tells me that you're not a native of our country at all. He says you came from South Africa."

A tender look settled on the captive's face and he wriggled his long rabbit-like ears.

"Africa," he mused. "Yes, Happy Giggles is right. And sometimes I almost wish I were back there again. My, what great times we used to have! Why, I never thought anything of swallowing a whole army at a time."

This sounded so funny to Dotty that she laughed out loud.

"You may laugh if you wish," continued Mr. Aard-vark, "but I'm telling the truth. I cleaned out a whole army just before I was caught and brought here. I never will forget how I slept that day, and when it grew dark, I crawled out of my burrow. You know that we aard-varks all live in burrows about four feet under ground, don't you?" When Dotty nodded, he went on:

"Well, I crawled out, hungry as a bear. I was just wondering where to go in search of food, when I caught sight of a tall mound rising in the moonlight. I knew the ant family living there would be sound asleep, so I decided to try my luck. I sneaked over to the ant house and began to dig. The ants, about a thousand strong, swarmed out of the anthill. I just mopped my long slender tongue in among them and before you could count a hundred, I had devoured them all.

"Someway, the other mounds got wind of my visit," he continued, "and ants by the millions swarmed from that village of anthills and when I got through, there wasn't an ant in sight. That's one thing I can say—when an aard-vark sets his mind on a good square meal, he goes right after it, and when I finished with that village, there wasn't an ant left in it."

"My, you must like ant meat to eat a whole army of ants at once!" Dotty exclaimed.

"That's not the funniest part," laughed Mr. Aard-vark. "You see, the ant mounds are from three feet to seven feet high, and are built very strong. Why, when you see them at a distance, they look like an African village. But I soon make short work of them, I can tell you."

He stuck out his long slimy tongue and showed Dotty.

"With that weapon," he declared, "I can draw whole armies into my mouth at once. In Africa they call me the 'ground hog.' I guess they have good reason."

"I'll say so," Dotty laughed.

Just then her mama called and Dotty and Happy Giggles ran out of the pen to join her, promising Mr. Aard-vark they would come back and see him quite often.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Why Should an Idle Question Trouble Mrs. Marks?

TURNING from the door she had just flung shut, Mrs. Petey Marks swung toward me with crimsoned cheeks and furtive eyes.

Had I seen the surprising number of fur cloaks in her closet? This, I knew, was the question sorely troubling her, and I summoned all the power of dissimulation I possessed to reassure her. Fortunately, when she had made her dash toward the door, I intuitively had turned my face to another quarter of the room, and I did not look toward the closet as I spoke enthusiastically:

"What a pretty lamp, Mrs. Marks! You'll pardon my speaking of it, I know. It is so lovely!"

I was speaking only the truth. The electric reading lamp upon a small table at the head of the bed was a most exquisite thing in coloring, its pedestal ground-work tinted the green of the first tender leaves of spring, and overrun with tiny white blossoms. The parchment shade, in a clever blending of the same green and old rose, had morning-glories rioting over it, and the chatelaine of the apartment had possessed the good sense to place only the plainest sheer white scarf below it.

I felt her troubled, questioning gaze upon me and knew that she was debating my sincerity. She is so curious a combination of child-like naivete and sharp worldly cynicism, that I was not sure which quality would pull down the scales. But her voice held a note of distinct relief when she spoke, and I knew that my ruse had succeeded.

"You'd Like Mollie."

"I kinda thought that would hit you in the eye," she chuckled. "Myself, I don't care for it so much. I'd like something a little more striking—there was a red one with black figures on it that took my eye. But Petey he got this for one of my Christmas presents, and of course I couldn't kick—didn't want to—for I do like it lots, but the red one was swell!"

She wafted a reminiscent sigh toward the red lamp, while I struggled with the anachronism of Petey Marks being responsible for the selection of the artistic thing upon the table.

"Petey didn't pick it out," his spouse rattled on. "He knew I wanted a lamp, and so he got a girl friend of mine to give things the once-over, and she picked this. She's an awful queer girl in her tastes, Mollie is, awful ambitious, too, always crazy to read what the real swells have in their homes, but she never wants nothing real stunning the way I do. You'd like Mollie, I'll bet, and I want her to see you. She's always tellin' me what a real lady acts like, and I'd like her to know I've found one."

There was such ingenuous sincerity in her tone, that I found myself flushing like a schoolgirl at the compliment.

A Natural Question.

"Thank you," I managed to say, smiling. "That's the nicest thing I've had said to me in a long time. And I'm sure I'd like very much to know Mollie."

"I'll bring her in the next time she comes over," she promised, the while I quickly repented my impetuous invitation. I knew only too well how strenuous would be Dicky's objection to my entertaining Mrs. Marks or any of her friends, even in the most casual manner.

"But I'll be sure that swell husband of yours is out first," my hostess chuckled, leading the way back into the larger room, and I wondered if she possessed telepathic powers. "There's two reasons for that. One is because he'd just about as soon see a dead clam around as me or any of my friends. Oh, I'm not blaming you!" as I began a perfunctory protest. "But you know it as well as I do. And the other reason is that Mollie shouldn't be flashed sudden-like on any perfectly good husband. Petey, he's used to her. He's known her since she was a kid, and she ain't his style anyway, but—isn't your husband an artist?"

"Yes," I returned a bit stiffly, wondering to what point this rambling monologue was leading.

"I thought so. Well, he'll be a queer one if he don't fall for Mollie with a great big thump. There's been two or three of 'em wanted her to pose for 'em, but nothing cooking with Mollie. I don't know what she's got in the back of her head to make of herself, but whatever it is she thinks posing would be a mark against her, and so she won't do it, although it would be good pay."

"What is she doing now?" I asked, not because I had any real curiosity on the subject, but to hide the uncomfortable and ridiculous annoyance I felt at Mrs. Marks' intimation that my husband would "fall for Mollie with a great big thump."

To my surprise Mrs. Marks' face flew signals of embarrassment.

"Why! She's—she's a bookkeeper in my—in a fur house," she stammered.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

Ways to Simplify Your Housekeeping with Real System

By WANDA BARTON

"DO you know what you think you do?" Any housewife who has attempted to teach new help their duties has probably asked herself this question, and consequently has sincere pity for those who have over-estimated their own practical knowledge and are going through the same experience.

The silent person who follows you about as the teaching progresses—herself an unknown quantity—may know all you are laboriously trying to explain to her in a pleasant way so that she will like you. She may, on the other hand, be listening to what is Greek to her. And her silence has the effect of making you for the moment doubt your own ability to teach and shaking your faith in what you really do know.

The necessity that arises to force us to teach also awakens us to the fact that we must have system in order to teach. If we have no system it behooves us to work out one without delay. Every well-regulated household should have system, for system saves time, money, wear and tear, and enables one to keep help after the manner of men in their offices. System gives stability to household labor, which it lacks when hit or miss methods are in operation.

A clever woman called upon to teach newly-engaged help their duties has a system that is workable, and as she teaches it point by point, she leaves written instructions or formulas, so that the maid may refer to them should she be hazy upon any special point. Everything is down on schedule, so there can be no excuse for misunderstandings. This is the right way. If you are interested and have one or more helpers to manage, it is a good idea to evolve a system of your own that will meet your particular needs.

Meal-time, days for certain work, time off duty, methods of cleaning and ways of cooking vary with different families, so that in teaching a maid, you must say to her: "Forget what you have done elsewhere. This is the way I want my work done."

Work in a house is quite different from work in an apartment or flat, and the system required is different. In an apartment help by the day or hour works well, as the help sleeps out in most places.

I know one woman who has found the services of a man hired by the hour a solution of her help problems. The laundry is sent out. The man comes in and brushes down walls and paint, cleans rugs, dusts and polishes the furniture, oils the floors, turns mattresses and does any other odd jobs. This work takes about four hours, once a week. Then he makes a second call during the week to straighten up. The result is a spic-and-span place.

When work is poorly planned, it takes twice as long to do it, and twice the energy is wasted in fussing over it. We hear a lot about system but if they are not used intelligently they are useless. First, adopt system, then see that it is carried out. This demonstrates that we have learned and can teach.

WHEN one you love is absent—when the whole house seems empty because he is away—his picture brings a measure of comfort and the miles and the hours seem to fade away. Then it is that a light in the window placed there in the good, old-fashioned way, seems to flame before his picture like a tribute to his love, just as the beams shining through the window seem like Love, itself, beckoning—welcoming him—home!

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Points of View

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

"YES," said the man, "I've had a great time in my life. I've worked hard and planned and schemed and fretted and fumed—and now I'm on easy street and sometimes I'm sorry I am. I'd like to be back in the thick of things again.

"I began life as a ranch hand at $30 a month and found. I got a calf and a cow and I started in and took up some land and got married and got some more cattle and some more land and started a dairy and I was up every morning before daylight and went to bed at sundown too tired to sit up half an hour after supper.

"We worked, my wife and I, together in the heat and in the cold, in the rain and in the drought. And always I saw things growing and things improving and always there was something ahead to work for and the children grew—yes, there were six of them, the best children in the world—six that grew up, I mean. We lost four and now the six are all married and gone and we've got the big house and the home place and I wish we were young and beginning all over again. It isn't what you get that counts, after all—it's what you're after, isn't it?"

"Well," said the man's wife when the man had gone, "that's the way he looks at it. Let me tell you my side of the story. I had ten children—a new one every two years and less. There was always a baby in the cradle and one just learning to walk, and if you don't think that means hard work you don't know much about raising a family. The Summer with a drought—that's the way he thinks of it, I think of it as the Summer I lost my first-born son.

She Wouldn't "Go Back"

"It was so hot and so dry I used to watch the sky for the sign of a single cloud. Somehow I got to thinking that if it rained the baby would live—but it didn't rain and the baby died. Oh, yes, we lost the crops, too, but I didn't seem to care about them.

"And then there was the Winter and the heavy snow—we couldn't get off the place for nearly three months. It was great for the Winter wheat, they say, but my little girl caught cold and the doctor couldn't get through the drifts in time and we had to dig three feet through the snow to find the earth for her grave.

"I've hated the sight of snow ever since.

"The other two children—they died in the Summer time when the scarlet fever went round. I thought I'd never get over that, but here I am alive and well, miles away from the old house where my children were born—and died.

"Life's strange, isn't it? And folks are queer, too. He looks back and thinks about the acres he bought and the cattle he sold, and I think back and remember my children that are gone.

"Oh, yes, the children who lived are a great comfort. They're all married now and have their own homes and I don't see much of them, but I like to think of them and they write me nice letters. But—go back and live through what we lived through again? No, I thank you! Not for me!"

Is It Always the Same?

And the man's wife sighed with a deep sigh like the sound of the wind in the pine trees outside the door.

And her eyes were deep and full of sorrow.

I wonder how it would be if we could take the same story of the same lives and hear the man's side and the woman's side—would there always be such a difference in the point of view?

Advice to Girls By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

Do you think five or six years is too great a difference in age, if the girl is the older?

I shall be thirty my next birthday and am going with a young man of twenty-four. Although I have never been taken for more than from twenty-two to twenty-five, and do not feel any older in experience, etc., I wonder if there is really too great a difference. WONDERING.

WONDERING: Six years is a big difference, my dear, especially since you are the older. Try not to become too interested in this young man because it would be much wiser for you to marry one of your own age or older.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl seventeen years of age and a senior in high school.

I have been going with a young man four years my senior for about one year. I thought I was in love with him, but now I find there is another young man in town whom I like better than I do the first. But when I am away from the first young man I cry and worry all the time. Please give me your advice as to what I should do. TROUBLED.

TROUBLED: Keep both of the young men for friends, my dear, but do not consider them so seriously until you are older and know your own mind.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Describes a Dainty Ruffled Frock for Evening Wear.

MARGE, a friend of Gaby's, has been planning a trip abroad in the early Fall.

She came into the studio in a cloud of dust, as Gaby described it to-day, and asked Gaby and me to go to lunch with her.

"I've seen a perfect peach of a dress," she burst out in an enthusiastic tone. "But I don't want to get it till I have your expert opinion."

After this, we were more than anxious to go, and we all three started out in high spirits.

We lunched at a cunning little place Marge had discovered not long ago.

"I hate going to the same place for lunch every day," she explained. "I think the thing to do is to know any number of good places, and then go where the spirit mores."

We were glad to know about this one, and the delicious muffins made us feel sure we'd go back again.

"This frock is the bouffant type," Marge explained as we walked along the Avenue.

"I found it at a smart little shop in a side street, and as it is most attractive, and reduced to a very reasonable price, I feel that it would be a good buy."

We were ushered into the little shop by a polite saleswoman who recognized Marge immediately.

"I hope it hasn't been sold," was the latter's first remark.

"No, Miss Swope," the saleswoman replied. "A young lady looked at it this morning, and she's coming back after she thinks it over."

"That makes me sure I want it," Marge whispered to me. "You see it's not my usual type, and I think most people have to consider a frock that is a departure from the kind they usually get."

"What is different about it?" I asked when the woman had gone back to bring it forth.

"It's bouffant, and I don't usually wear anything but straight models," Marge replied.

"With your hair demurely parted in the middle, I think it ought to be very good," I advised her.

Just then the saleswoman came forth with one of the loveliest creations I've seen in some time.

"How could you hesitate?" I asked, as she held up the frock, revealing row on row of white taffeta ruffles, each one edged with a narrow row of sheer white net footing.

"Wait till you see it on her. You can't really tell about a frock till you see it on," Gaby advised.

Marge retired into a little dressing room, and soon came forth in the lovely dress.

"A perfect dream," Gaby pronounced it.

Strips of the taffeta dipped down to form bands over the arms, and from the center of the bodice bunches of pastel ribbons dropped from beneath a silk flower of flesh tint.

Pastel Ribbons and Net Edging Trim This Lovely White Evening Gown.

"Flowers in the hair to match the ones on the frock are the latest things from Paris," Marge said, turning her head for us to see the flowers stuck low in her coiffure.

And she bought the frock.

YOUR HEALTH

How to Keep Your Home Free from Disease Dangers

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

IN the annual report of the owners of a model building are some interesting statistics about tuberculosis. They are worth thinking about.

This company has erected a building in which hundreds of women who go to business every day are comfortably housed at a reasonable price. I have visited the establishment and on one occasion talked to a group of the residents. On this account the living conditions and the type of people using them are familiar to me.

In the report, there is contrasted the health conditions of the sanitary district surrounding it with the conditions in the home itself. Living in that area are one hundred thousand people. The death rate from all causes last year was 13.6 to the thousand. Among the tenants of the home the mortality was only 7.7 per thousand.

The tuberculosis rate in the large area was 9.49 per thousand. In the model building there were only 2.62 cases of tuberculosis to the thousand.

The conditions of poverty are conducive to disease and death. Bad and insufficient food, overcrowding, lack of ventilation and sunlight, discontent—all these are factors which bring sickness and early death. Tuberculosis thrives in such surroundings.

But disease is not entirely the result of poverty. Too often it comes from ignorance.

There is no doubt that living in a well-conducted community, a place where there are really community interests, is certain to bring about health-giving practices, such as the less fortunate dwellers in some tenement houses do not have.

For a long time I have preached the doctrine of making health contagious. If you do not know the rules of right living seek out somebody who does know them and then imitate your model.

In the modern and sanitary house where these working women live, there are leaders who influence and direct the others. In this particular home there is an intelligent matron, a trained nurse and a conscientious physician. Under such direction and leadership health is made contagious.

More and more, towns, villages and even rural districts have their visiting nurses. It is their business, not to treat the sick, but to give instructions in those things which promote health and prevent disease.

Good housing is vital to good health and for protection against tuberculosis. Everybody should be trained in what it means to be well-housed. Almost any dwelling can be made a sanitary dwelling, if thought and well-directed efforts are applied to it.

Suppose we take occasion today or tomorrow to survey the home in which we live. Are there some changes that might be made about the windows, or in the location of the furniture with reference to sunlight and air, trifling changes but which might mean much in improved health?

Are you using for a parlor, decorated with your precious furniture, the best room in the house which is seldom entered except for weddings and funerals? It might better be the kitchen where the women of the household spend long hours, or a bedroom where about half your time is spent.

Look over your home and, if necessary, re-arrange it, knowing now that tuberculosis and general disease are very greatly decreased by proper housing.

A.—This is caused by some nerve condition. You should have an examination by a neurologist and he will advise treatment for you.

L. L. M. Q.—My face is scarred as a result of having pricked pimples with a needle. Is there any way to get rid of these?

2.—What can I do for enlarged pores?

A.—You are paying the penalty for having pricked these pimples. Scars are hard to get rid of; if slight they may fade out in time. Sometimes a specialist can help with X-Ray treatments.

2.—Try hot and cold applications, alternately for 10 minutes each, followed by massage with a good cold cream.

ODD FACTS

One may scan the records of the Patent Office in vain to find the name of Jenny Lind as an inventor. Yet she is said to be responsible in a large degree for the "parlor car." When P. T. Barnum took the famous singer to America she was obliged to spend much of her time in traveling from place to place on the wretched railroads of the period. So, to reduce the discomforts of the trip, she had the seats of an ordinary car removed and the vehicle furnished with chairs, tables and other pieces of furniture which would be appropriate to a parlor. She jocosely called this her "parlor car," and it is undoubtedly from this that we get the name for our Pullman chair cars.

In the year ending June 30, 1922, over 170,000 aliens became naturalized citizens of the United States. Of this number 27,300 were Italians, 23,200 were Germans, 21,500 British, 19,000 Russians, 14,600 Poles, 13,600 Austrians, and the rest of other nationalities. This does not include those who took out first papers, but pertains only to final naturalization.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 16-17.

Sunday's horoscope is not favorable and discourages all change or travel. There is a menace from ill-temper and hasty deeds. Law is to be shunned.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of anxiety, which may be magnified by quarrels. Shun change and travel. A child born on this day will be fond of change, quick and clever, but may be impulsive unless it is well trained.

Monday's astrological reading enjoins quiet and conservative deportment in business as well as domestic relations. The disposition may be depressed.

Those whose birthday it is have the promise of an anxious year in which there should be conservative and quiet in all matters, both business and domestic. The affectional relations may have melancholy tendencies. A child born on this day should be given early training to develop responsible propensities.

A SURVEY OF U.S. PPOBLEMS

COOLIDGE'S IS FOR STABILITY NOT INERTIA.

Favors Enforcement of Prohibition, Bonus If Measures Are Provided to Secure Money and Selling of Muscle Shoals.

By Lawrence Martin

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—President Coolidge in ofce just over a month, has now completed his preliminary survey of the problems confronting his administration and has made up his mind to a definite policy with respect to most of them.

It is therefore possible today to state Mr. Coolidge's views as they have thus far ben developed on all the major domestic questions and to indicate his trend on international affairs.

The country has been informed that Mr. Coolidge has chosen "stability" as his slogan. He intends, however, to make it clear that it is stability and not inertia that he means.

Here in brief is how Mr. Coolidge stands on the major issues:

Prohibition: He favors fullest enforcement, but with a greater measure of cooperation from the states. He does not wish to put any greater responsibility on the states; he believes that responsibility already fixed and he intends, if possible to have the states meet their responsibilities.

Soldier Bonus: Mr. Coolidge's position here is that ocupied by Mr. Harding—that a bonus bill must be accompanied by practical measures for providing the necessary money, or the money must be in sight from some other source. He strongly favors the principle of adjusted compensation however, and would veto a bonus bill only if convinced it was uneconomic legislation.

Merchant Marine.

Pledged to preserve the American merchant marine, the president will accept the plan worked out by the shipping board for indirect government operation thru eighteen subsidiary corporations if he can be convinced of (1) its legality, and (2) its economic soundness.

Muscle Shoals—Mr. Coolidge favors prompt disposition by congress of the Muscle Shoals offer of Henry Ford. He will recommend action and probably will advise acceptance of the Ford offer, tho not directly in a message to congress.

Taxes—The president would like to see taxes reduced, but regards as more important at this juncture the continuance of the limitation of government expenditures, as the basis for tax reduction later. He will oppose tax tinkering if it is apparent the so-called reductions will mean only a shifting of the burden, with no honest saving to the taxpayers.

Tariff Question.

He will not tinker with the tariff himself and does not intend to permit the tariff commission to tinker with it, thru application of the elastic tariff provisions.

Railroads—There is a strong disposition to ditch the whole railroad legislative program Mr. Harding intended to recommend in December. Mr. Coolidge has not had time fully to study this problem and the consensus of opinion among his advisers has inclined him to wait before recommending the compulsory consolidation plan Mr. Harding favored.

World court—Ratification of the Harding-Hughes plan will be recommended to the senate. Other developments in the meantime which will come to light shortly are expected to affect materially Mr. Coolidge's advocacy of this plan.

Russia—Mr. Coolidge stands squarely with Secretary Hughes in his refusal to recognize Russia until communism has been definitely discarded and Russia lives up to her international obligations.

WALT MASON

Government as Usual

Our president, so good and wise, worn out by heavy labor dies. The people mourn, their sighs ascend: they've lost a brother and a friend. But government goes on as though there were no sable plumes of woe. Upon a bleak New England farm a rugged toiler lifts his arm and takes the presidential vow; to rule a realm, he leaves the plow. 'Twould be a cataclysmic thing if we were governed by a king, to have one monarch leave a throne, succeeded by a prince unknown. But here the people have in hand dominion over all the land, and forward goes the nation's car, without a jolt, without a jar, though statesmen put their tools aside, and lay them down at eventide. The great and good man laid to rest would say that this is for the best. Perhaps its hard for us to know there'll be small ripples when we go. it's natural for us to hope that when we're crossed the sunset slope, begarlanded with shining fame, the world will not be quite the same. Our government is founded well; the tolling of the iron bell that tells the passing of the great, disturbs no function of the state. A printer leaves the guiding helm; a farmer comes to rule the realm.

POLICE IN LARGE CITIES ARE LOSING BATTLE AGAINST AUTOMOBILE THIEVES

What is to be done about the automobile thief, particularly in the larger cities? Figures show that of all motor cars stolen, the number recovered and restored to their owners is dwindling year by year. In 1918 the police of New York CVity recovered three out of every four cars stolen. In 1921 they recovered only two out of every four. The figures of last year placed the number of recoveries at less than two out of four.

Records of cars stolen and cars recovered were obtained recently from twenty-eight cities of varying sizes. The chart reproduced above compares the average for several of the smaller cities with the average for New York, obviously the largest city on the list. Among the smaller communities, Newport reported the recovery of every car stolen from its citizens during a period of four years. The record of Evansville, Ind., was almost as good.

During the same years, New York and Chicago were finding the situation increasingly alarming. In 1921 New York recovered 3,451 of 6,808 cars stolen, while in 1922 its police were able to find only 3,220 of 7,107 stolen. The percentage of cars recovered by New York in 1922 was but 45 per cent of the total number stolen.

According to the police records of Lincoln there were one-hundred and thirty-eight cars stolen in Lancaster county in the year 1922. Fully sixty-per cent of these cars were either recovered by the police officials or reported found to the department. Eighty-one cars are reported on the records as being retrieved by the owners. Perhaps many other cars reported stolen were found but not reported to the officials. Quite a number of cars stolen out in the state were also recovered by the Lincoln police.

DISCUSS SCOUT PROGRAM

Scoutmasters and Assistants Inaugurate Monthly Meetings at Grand Hotel.

Numerous matters were discussed Monday noon at a meeting of Lincoln scoutmasters and assistant scoutmasters at the Grand hotel, and it was decided to make this the first of a series of monthly meetings. Commissioner J. L. McMaster presided and will direct the discussions at subsequent meetings, to be held the first Monday of each month.

Reports were made of the scout activities at the state fair and downtown during the week, and of preparations at the week end camp for taking care of the boys during the coming season. Steel cots have been installed and additional fireplaces built on the grounds.

The scouting program as outlined for the next year was discussed point by point.

LUELLA CUMMINGS IS SAFE

Parents in Lincoln Receive Word She Is Among Survivors of Japanese Disaster at Kobe.

Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Cummings have received word thru the state department that their daughter, Luella Cummings is among the survivors of the Japanese disaster at Kobe. Mr. and Mrs. Cummings had received a night letter from a friend in Berkeley Sunday stating that Miss Cummings had been seen in Tokio three weeks ago and that her roommate was rescued from the ruins of the hotel where they were staying after the disaster. The message from the state department merely stated that she was safe in Kobe and the family does not know whether or not she was in Tokio at the time of the catastrophe. Miss Cummings was employed in the office of an exporting firm in Japan for two years and then spent a year at home before going back the last time in May. The family has not yet heard directly from her.

COWGILL RODE BOTH SHIPS

Familiar With Two Destroyers on Rocks Off San Miguel Along Pacific Coast.

Commissioner Cowgill was a passenger on the U. S. naval destroyer Woodbury and also the destroyer S. P. Lee when those boats made trial trips in 1920 prior to their acceptance by the navy department. Both destroyers are now piled on the rocks with five other boats of their kind and the Pacific mail liner Cuba. They went aground off the San Miguel island, according to an associated Press story in Monday's State Journal.

"Both destroyers were exceptionally fast," said Mr. Cowgill. "They did 34 knots over a five hour stretch."

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. R. Millar had sent out announcements of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Minna Lee, to James Stanley Mathews of Atchison, Neb., on September 21.

The empress of Austria was assassinated at Geneva, Switzerland, by an anarchist.

The new parochial school house belonging to the St. Francis de Sales parish had been completed and the school moved into it.

The public schools of Lincoln had opened for the school year, 3,985 pupils registering. Mr. Saylor was superintendent and Mr. Waterhouse principal.

The executive committee of the Citizens Union in New York selected a state ticket, with Theodore Roosevelt heading the list as governor.

FIGHTING THE HESSIAN FLY

EASTERN NEBRASKA FARMERS WATCHING WHEAT PEST.

Tab Being Kept on Activity So That Seeding May Be Done When Best Results Will Follow.

Professor M. H. Swenk, of the state agricultural college, is giving much attention to the fight on the Hessian fly. Cass and Otoe counties were especially damaged by this pest during the past year. Professor Swenk has established a field observation station near Plattsmouth and is giving out information daily to the farmers in the effort to aid them in selecting the proper date for seeding winter wheat.

The plan of the fight is to seed late enough that the wheat plants will not reach a sufficient size to attract the flies. The flies lay their eggs on the young plant when the plant is large enough to attract them.

Recent reports issued by Professor Swenk from his field observation station follow:

"The Hessian fly field observation station, established as a result of the Hessian fly conference at Lincoln on August 13, was located on the farm of Glen Perry, four and one-half miles southwest of Plattsmouth, Cass county, on August 19. This location is in the center of a district heavily infested with the Hessian fly. Everything has been in readiness for the check-up on the emergence of fall brood of the Hessian fly for several days, and emergence began on Saturday, September 1. The counts for September 1, 2 and 3 are as follows:

		September 1	2	3
A.	Daily Flaxseed Counts:
1.	Total number of "flaxseeds" in 100 stubble plants	763	870	896
2.	Number of unemerged "flaxseeds" in 100 stubble plants	723	853	773
3.	Number of emerged "flaxseeds" in 100 stubble plants	39	87	123
B.	Daily Fly Emergence Counts:
4.	Total number of flies emerged from boxes	1	2	2
5.	Number of male flies emerged	0	2	2
6.	Number of female flies emerged	1	0	0
7.	Number of parasites emerged	8	12	17
C.	Daily Migration Screen Counts:
8.	Total number of flies on screens	5	6	4
D.	Daily Egg Counts:
9.	Number of eggs on 100 growing wheat plants	0	0	0

"From the above you will notice that emergence is well started, that parasites are emerging rather freely, that the flies are shifting about in the fields, but that egg laying has not yet begun.

"For a time reports will be made to you every second or third day, but as the time for the end of the fall brood approaches reports will be made daily. M. H. SWENK.

"The counts at the Hessian fly field observation station near Plattsmouth for September 4, 5 and 6 were as follows:

		September 4	5	6
A.	Daily Flaxseed Counts:
1.	Total number of "flaxseeds" in 100 stubble plants	1,056	448	485
2.	Number of unemerged "flaxseeds" in 100 stubble plants	914	312	344
3.	Number of emerged "flaxseeds" in 100 stubble plants	142	136	141
B.	Daily Fly Emergence Counts:
4.	Total number of flies emerged from boxes	7	9	8
5.	Number of male flies emerged	6	4	2
6.	Number of female flies emerged	1	5	6
7.	Number of parasites emerged	15	13	8
C.	Daily Migration Screen Counts:
8.	Total number of flies on screens	69	95	65
D.	Daily Egg Counts:
9.	Number of eggs on 100 growing wheat plants	0	0	230

"Note by the above, egg laying began September 6, five days after flies began to appear."

STERLING WANTS TRAFFIC

Colorado Town Defends Its Efforts to Re-Route Auto Tourists Over Its Denver Road.

The battle for tourist traffic in the west is still on and the Sterling-Sidney controversy has not abated. Writing the Journal concerning an item about this contest recently published H. M. Harms, secretary of the Sterling chamber of commerce says:

"The billboard erected by Sterling Fort Morgan, Greeley, Ft. Collins and Julesburg is 10x50 feet. On this board we show the most direct road from Big Springs, Neb., to Denver. We wish, further, to state that the distance from Big Springs is 212 miles, all of which, except 15 miles between Big Springs and Julesburg, is well graded and graveled, and there is about 25 miles of paving this side of Ft. Lupton. We will leave it to the general traveling public as to the condition of Colorado roads, and nine out of ten will tell you that Colorado roads are much better than either Nebraska or Wyoming roads.

"The distance from Big Springs to Denver via Sidney, Neb., and Cheyenne, Wyo., is about 265 miles and much of the road from Big Springs to Cheyenne is anything but a good highway, at this time. The road from Cheyenne into Denver, however, is good.

"In behalf of the people who have erected the sign board at Big Springs, that you have referred to, we wish to say that the information given on the board is not misleading, and no one headed for Denver or Colorado points will make a mistake in taking the road thru Sterling and Fort Morgan from where they may take either the Lincoln Highway thru Greeley, or the D. L. D. directly into Denver."

HITCHCOCK SUES ON STOCK DEAL

Lincoln Dealer Says Securities in Trade Misrepresented.

The case of Frank M. Stapleton against Will F. Hitchcock, a local automobile dealer, for possession of a Paige automobile, came to trial before District Judge Broady Monday morning The case is the outgrowth of a suit in termination of contract. Mr. Hitchcock alleges that he sold the car to Mr. Stapleton and took as a part of the payment $1,000 worth of bank stock which Mr. Stapleton represented to be the actual value of the stock. Mr. Hitchcock asserts that the stock is not worth the amount represented by Mr. Stapleton. He claims that he asked Mr. Stapleton to redeem this stock but he refused. Mr. Hitchcock then levied on the car which was in turn replevined from him by Mr. Stapleton. Mr. Hitchcock now seeks possession of the car and a deficiency judgment for the remainder of the amount due on the sotck.

Mr. Matson pleaded innocense and the case was continued until Thursday morning when it will be tried. Police allege that the dance was staged at 2022 L street and that a collection was taken up at the close of the affair. Detectives Rymer and Schneible placed Mr. Matson under arrest at 11:45 p. m. Saturday.

Representative Keck of Polk county filed an informal complaint with the state railway commission Monday as to the handling of grain cars at Valparaiso, where he has interests. The Union Pacific has a rule requiring that cars from other roads be first used to carry out of state shipments, but the supply is not equal to the demand. The wait of three or four days is objected to when there are plenty of Union Pacific cars in storage. The agent, however, cannot touch these without instructions from the distributor. Immediate attention of the proper officials was called to the situation, with instructions to see that the delays do not occur again.

The Mines of Kursk.

Boston Transcript: The light that has been thrown upon the hills of Kursk in the announcement of the discovery of hitherto undreamed-of deposits of iron ore in that region has turned the eyes of the industrial nations up on Russia. Germany's, indeed, have long been turned thither, and even, it is to be assumed, toward this very spot, because of some knowledge or at least strong suspicion of the wealth that lies hidden in those hills. The statement of the soviet government, that these iron mines need not disturb the rest of the world, since they will not be worked for at least two years and cannot begin to yield profits for over twenty years, may not be so readily accepted by other nations as Russia may hope. The persistence with which Germany has continued to besiege and bombard the Russian territory ever since the papers of her scientist Leyst fell into her hands, indicates that she will not be content to remain in the background and refrain from making further claims upon those iron fields, whether Russia takes two or twenty years to work them.

This vast wealth, awaiting Russia, will open new problems for her government to deal with, and its movements in the near future will doubtless be controlled largely by consideration of them. Germany notoriously covets the territory in which the mines are situated and is said to have gone so far as to have operations upon them begun by her agents; and the enthusiasm of the Russians over the great discovery has thus been measurably dampened. They see potential enemies arising on all sides to claim concessions of the fields which have so long lain undeveloped.

How the Russian soviet government will solve the new problems which are thus arising, can only be conjectured. How the Russian people, who have for some years been so greatly interfered with in their pursuit of work, will regard this new source of wealth and its relations to themselves and to their government, is likewise impossible to predict, tho obviously of immeasurable importance. At any rate it may be taken for granted that the possibility of revolution again occurring in either Russia or Germany will be materially affected by this discovery, of so great significance to the industries of those countries

Five Years Ago.

That the war was really won on the fields of Champagne five years ago this month, in a dramatic battle that escaped its full share of popular attention at the time and that has been nearly forgotten since, is the conclusion presented by a military writer who tells a vivid story of this little-known conflict in McClure's Magazine.

Altho practically ignored by the American public, the triumphant resistance of the French troops and of our own Rainbow division under the leadership of General Gouraud—a recent visitor to the United States—really gave the coup de grace to Pan-German ambitions when the Rheims-Chalons offensive of July 1918 was launched.

The author of this article, George F. Milton, jr., writes in McClure's, "When the fury of that assault had passed, the Germans found that at last they had met their masters. After the Champagne there were no more German drives; instead, every day from July 18th to the armistice an allied force was battering away at the enemy, thinning his reserves, capturing his cannon, driving him back."

To the strategy of General Gouraud, the one-armed hero who was America's visitor this summer, to the French Poilus, and to the American doughboys of the Rainbow division goes the glory of the victory, he adds.

So confident was the German high command of the success of its plans to smash the French at Suippes, take Chalons and encircle Rheims, that it had constructed a big concrete watch-tower near Somme-Py, from which the kaiser and the crown prince expected to watch the break-thru. Instead, they saw their last great effort smashed.

An amusing incident is cited by Milton as typical of the utter surprise of the Germans after their picked shock troops had been thrown back:

"A pompous German major, coolly motoring into the French village of Suippes at 6:30 on the morning of July 15, 1918, suddenly found himself a prisoner of the poilus. "Gott in Himmel! Suippes is ours—we took it at 6 o'clock!" he sputtered in astonished wrath. And he showed his time-table of the great German victory drive to prove that Suippes had already been captured! Something had upset that famous schedule.

"On the front of the Sixth French army one American, one Italian, six French divisions and a Polish brigade had successfully blocked the assault of nineteen German shock divisions and ruined the grandoise plan of the Germans to break thru the Champagne, capture Chalons and cut the French armies."

Household Helps.

Designer Magazine: When a lock seems to be out of order, before sending for a locksmith put the key which fits the lock in oil, and then insert the key in the lock. Often all the lock needs is oiling.

If rice is boiled for about fifteen minutes and the water poured off and diluted to the proper consistency it is much better for starching black cotton material than the regular starch.

Safety matches can be struck as easily on a piece of smooth coal as they can on the safety-match box. Smooth iron will also answer. Try the top of the stove.

Enameled kettles that have burned dry should be filled at once with boiling water, as cold water would cause the enamel to crack or chip.

Keep a clothes pin near the sink to remove what has stuck to the pans. It will not scratch as other implements do.

To prevent corn bread from sticking to the bottom of the plan, sprinkle meal over the bottom of the greased pan and let brown before putting in the bread.

Too Simple for Europe to Grasp.

New Republic: It is deplorable that our state department should have its motives so perennially, so unjustly, misunderstood. It has just issued a long statement explaining that it has never promised "moral or political support" to the holders of the Chester grant. To those who know our innocent and simple-minded government at first hand, this is entirely plausible—but how is one to convince the sophisticated chancelleries of Europe that it is true? Europe has just seen an agreement consummated with the Turks at Lausanne after arduous months of haggling; and it has seen that agreement torn up with its ink yet wet because America refused to accept it. Why did America refuse? Because pre-war grants to English and French interests were confirmed which resulted in part with the recent concessions to Admiral Chester and his associates. The state department knows, and all Americans know, that Minister Grew labored in behalf of a sacred principle. The principle of the open door. If no Chester grant existed, he would still have done the same. But how are we to make our real Europe believe a truth so foreign to its own ideals?

GIRL INJURED IN LEAP FROM A CAR

When High School Lads Head Auto in Wrong Direction Myrtle Meyers Somersaults to Pavement.

As the result of leaping from a moving auto at Twenty-sixth and Q streets at 11:35 a. m. Monday, Miss Myrtle Meyer, thirteen year-old daughter of Charles Meyer, 825 C, assistant city engineer, sustained a severely bruised shoulder and elbow. She was unconscious for nearly half an hour. The back of her head evidently hit the pavement. She will recover, according to Dr. W. H. Slattery, who attended her.

The victim and Bernice Voss, fourteen, 846 C, were on their way home from Elliott school when three high school lads drove up in an auto and offered to take the girls home, according to the story of the latter. After they were seated in the car the boys drove north instead of in the direction of the girls' homes. Miss Meyer became alarmed and leaped from the auto, turning a complete somersault before she struck the asphalt pavement. The boys are: Louis Holmes, sixteen, 1539 North Twenty-ninth; Sam Carter, sixteen, Forty-third and A, and Bernard Bathel, sixteen, 1735, North Twenty-ninth. Young Carter was driving the car.

The unconscious girl was picked up from the street by a resident near Twenty-sixth and Q. She was carried into a nearby house and medical aid summoned. She was later removed to her home. The boys were taken to the police station by Officer Towle. They were released two hours later. They claim that they went to the Elliott building to see an instructor and the girls voluntarily took the auto ride.

the swell came in, gobs lined the rail and jumped barefooted to the slippery rock. Many lost their hold, but were caught by those who had made the leap in safety. Conroy was lost when he attempted to make the leap.

The Delphi broke in two shortly afterward.

The Nicholas was on a reef further out and long thru the night the crew and officers were forced to remain aboard.

On account of the darkness and the rocks, neither lifeboats or rafts could be launched with safety.

Seaman Carter was one of the numerous heroes of the disaster. He succeeded in lowering a raft and piloting it thru the treacherous surf eighteen times, every time bringing a group of his shipmates ashore.

Commander Edward Watson of the squadron stuck to his command thru-out and directed the rescue work. He finally returned with the last survivors aboard the special train. His fellow officers reported he was near a state of collapse and refused anyone permission to see him or the captain of any of the other vessels.

Boatswain's Mate a Hero.

Boatswain's Mate Peterson of the Young was one of the outstanding figures in the tragedy. At the risk of his life he leaped into the tumbling sea and swam forty yards thru the rocks to the Chauncey and carried a life line.

Over this line seventy of the crew of the Young crawled, hand over hand, from the upturned side of the vessel to safety.

Before Peterson's heroic act, the men clinging to the overturned destroyer cheered each other in the face of death, for they all expected to go down any minute.

The survivors began reaching the rocks which form the bluff of the shoreline half an hour after the Delphi struck, but the last man was not removed until nearly eighteen hours afterward.

The body of Chief Foreman's Mate Conroy was found on the beach a quarter mile from the place where he sank after he failed to make the leap to the rock.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.—Captain Holand of the passenger freighter Cuba and a few men still are guarding the wrecked vessel while the smashing surf pounds at her hulk and threatens to break her up any minute, according to latest word today. Federal telegraph radio dispatches report that the Pacific mail line ship which went on the rocks of San Miguel island Saturday still is afloat.

A great herd of sea lions swarmed around the lifeboats filled with passengers and threatened to attack, survivors of the wreck reported. Swimming about in the heavy sea, the lions greatly impeded the work of rescue, it was said.

Twenty-two members of the crew, one passenger and $190,000 of bullion were said to have been landed at San Pedro at 2:30 a. m. by the U. S. S. destroyer Selfridge. The ship is wrecked a few miles from the spot where seven navy destroyers shared a similar fate.

Reports originally crediting the Cuba with having $2,500,000 in bullion aboard were denied by company officials.

The tug Fearless is standing by.

Sixty-eight survivors were brought into San Pedro Sunday by the destroyer Reno, which providentially hove on the scene of the wreck after the Cuba's wireless had gone out of commission.

Nine members of the crew who had rowed out to sea in hope of summoning aid were picked up by the tanker W. S Miller and are being taken to San Francisco.

MRS. E. M. SIAS IS DEAD

Word Received in Lincoln of Death in Forest Grove, Ore., of Former Bethany Woman.

Word has been received by Ernest J Sias of the death of his mother, Mrs E M Sias, at her home at Forest Grove, Ore. For a number of years Mrs Sias lived at Bethany and had many friends living there and in Lincoln. She had been in fire health for one of her years and the news of her death came as a sad shock. During the latter part of June and the first part of July, Mr Sias made a trip to Oregon to visit his mother.

BLAMES CURRENTS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—"Some unusual current in the Santa Barbara channel was given in an official announcement by navy officers at headquarters here today as the probable cause of Saturday night's wreck of seven destroyers near Point Arguello, Calif.

While they did not mention the Japanese earthquake and tidal waves, it was known that navy officers had that phenomena in mind—that they believed some weird reflection across the Pacific upset currents off the coast and threw on the rocks the seven fighting ships.

The statement was made in connection with the convening of a board of inquiry to determine cause and responsibility for the disaster. The inquiry will be held at San Diego, Cal.

A Wrecked Fragment.

"If a military emergency should develop suddenly under present conditions we would have difficulty in mobilizing within a month even 30,000 men out of the army of 125,000 authorized by Congress.

"Over one-third of the mobile combat regiments now on the rolls of the regular army consist of but one officer and two men each!

"In all that army today there is but one infantry regiment fit to engage in combat under conditions of modern warfare. That is the Twenty-ninth Infantry, now on demonstration duty at Fort Bennings, Georgia.

"Cavalry and field artillery are as badly off. They are under-officered, under-manned, under-trained and under-horsed.

"In the opinion of wellinformed military leaders, it would take us six months, at least, to mobilize 1,000,000 men. From a military standpoint we are, to all intents and purposes, actually defenseless today against any sudden attack in which our ability to mobilize quickly would mean victory."

These startling revelations of Uncle Sam's present unpreparedness are made in McClure's Magazine, Herbert B. Mayer, late lieutenant of infantry in the regular army. To tell this story of what he terms "our present grave national peril," he recently gave up his commission and the promise of a career in the army. His statements, he announces, have all been checked by some of the highest officers in the army today, and are based in addition on confidential reports, charts and other documents of the most unimpeachable authority.

From these authorities Mr. Mayer shows that of our magnificent fighting force of 1918, two million strong, we now have left only a wrecked fragment, unfit to take the field against any modern army.

"The Army List for 1923," he says, "carries the numerical designations of 105 regiments of infantry, cavalry and field artillery. Of these, 37 are 'inactive.' This means that they have been demobilized save for one officer and two men each, in charge of the records of the old organizations.

"Responsibility for these grave conditions," he finds, "rests not so much upon Congress as a whole as upon a small, but vigorous, anti-Army group in the House. The more active members of this group appear to be concentrated in the war department subcommittee of the House appropriations committee, headed by Representative Daniel Reed Anthony of Kansas—himself a leader and at times the sponsor of some of the measures which have brought the army to its present state."

A Study in Wages.

Tacoma NewsTribune: A man had been in a butcher shop for years. He knew his job thoroly, was liked and trusted by employer and patrons. His weekly envelope held $40. Then he left to do painting.

His reasons were simple. On his old job he had to be on deck at 7:30 a. m., and did not close the doors until 6 p. m. Wednesday afternoon off, but Saturday evenings the shop was open. On the painting job his hours were 7:30 a. m. to 4 p. m., with the Saturdays ending at noon. Wages, $50. He was working fourteen hours less a week and getting $10 more.

The $40 weekly pay envelope came right along fifty-two weeks in the year. Painting is a seasonal trade. Even tho this man, who is capable and ambitious, turns to indoor painting and varnishing in the winter, the chances are that there would be a good many weeks when the $50 shrinks to $20 or $10, or nothing at all. Moreover, the job contains hazards of ladders and lead quite unknown in the retail meat business.

The long hours in the market were not all hard. There were rush hours, but there were also dead spots in every day. The journey to the market was of the same daily length. Painting jobs are at various distances from home. The total gain in ease, week by week, is really slight.

Moving from one job to a better one is the right and sensible way to take advantage of American opportunity. But sometimes it's well to do a little figuring first. All the factors are not on the surface, and jobs are not always what they seem.

FULFILLMENT OF PROPHECY

Revelation, says: 'Behold, He (Christ) cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see Him, and they also which pierced Him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him. Even so, Amen.' Rev. 1:7.

"In the same book, the apostle was given a view of the awfulness that would come upon the whole earth when Christ returns. He says: 'And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places. And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves, in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the lamb; for the great day of His wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?' Rev. 6: 14-17.

"Jesus extends a loving invitation to mankind in this book, to get into harmony with him, in these words: 'I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye salve that thou mayest see. As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore and repent. Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I shall come into him, and he with me. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.'

"There is still ample opportunity for all humanity to escape the judgments of God, and the Adventists will do their part toward warning humanity of those judgments, so that all who will may escape them."

Awful Remedy.

Chicago News: "O dear, O dear!" exclaimed the angelic landlady. "I don't know what to do! The roosters next door keep Mr. Harding awake, and the rats in the henyard annoy Miss Mucilage, and I don't know what to do! I hate to quarrel with my neighbors."

"Why don't you poison 'em?" suggested the villainous boarder. "I mean the roosters and the rats."

"No, no, that wouldn't be any fun," objected the sporty boarder. "The thing to do is to get an air rifle that doesn't make any noise and sit by an open window, and as fast as you get a shot at one, pot him with the air gun. I'll do it for you."

"They might catch you," argued the zoological guest. "You should get a weasel and quietly turn him loose. He'll fix all the rats and chickens in short order and enjoy the pastime."

"For my part," said the apprehensive boarder "I don't want any weasels popping around here."

"What would you suggest, then?" demanded the practical boarder. "Of what use is criticism unle you can give us something constructive?"

"Well," replied the apprehensive boarder, "I'm sorry not to be constructive, but the only remedy I know of is quite troublesome. Were it not for the troublesome feature I would suggest putting phosphorus on a rat and turning him loose."

"All you have to do is to catch a rate and rub phosphorus on him and turn him loose and he'll do the rest. Every rat in the neighborhood will leave and leave in a hurry and take his family with him. Just one look at a rat with phosphorus on him strikes terror to the hardiest rats, while owing to the sociable nature of the the one ornamental with phosphorus will pursue his little friends and playmates until he has driven them all down to the river, where they are drowned. And then after that the phosphorized rat will start in and scare all the chickens to death.

"But the trouble is that the phosphorescent rat strikes terror to human beings as well. On one occasion which I have in mind a phosphorescent rat drove one of our eminent citizens crazy when it suddenly emerged from the hind side of a hooch barrel in the citizen's cellar.'

"Well, I don't think we'll try that scheme, announced the landlady, and the bibulous boarder shuddered

With Five Days Remaining, Champion Says He's Ready To Go

DEMPSEY HAS SPEED OF A LIGHTWEIGHT

But Old Power Is Missing From His Punches—DeForest Not Overly Impressed But Says Firpo Can't Win.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Supreme Court Justice Hagerty in Brooklyn today denied the application for a writ of mandemus to prevent the Dempsey-Firpo fight September 14, filed by Harry Wills, colored heavyweight and his manager, Paddy Mullins.

By Henry L. Farrell

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, N. Y. Sept. 10.—With five days remaining until he defends his title against Luis Firpo, the South American Giant, Jack Dempsey said today that he was 'ready to go."

"I'm satisfied with myself and that's enough. I feel good and am confident that I will be able to win," the champion said when asked how he felt after reaching the final stages of his training.

Dempsey, never endangered in the past by overconfidence, is not making any mistake this time.

Knows Firpo Is Dangerous

"Regardless of what is being said about Firpo. I know he is going to put up a hard fight. He is big and strong and he can hit, and any big, strong fellow is dangerous as long as he is standing," Dempsey said.

Dempsey admits that he might not be as good as when he won the heavyweight championship from Jess Willard.

"To remain in perfect condition and at the top of form, a boxer must work oftener than I have been able to do. The reason I feel so good now is because of the training I went thru for the Gibbons fight and the hard fifteen rounds I had with him," the champion said.

Champion Appears Bit Light

Physically the champion looks as good as when he went into the ring at Shelby last July. He still looks rather light when compared to his big sparring partners. His skin is clearer and almost free of the blemishes that were so noticeable when he was training at Great Falls early in the summer.

The champion worked out yesterday with George Godfrey, Jack Geyer and Farmer Lodge, three big fellows. He is still missing much with his right hand, as he did in the training at Great Falls, and he still seems rather easy to find with a left hand. It was apparent too, in his workout that he leaves himself open to many right hands.

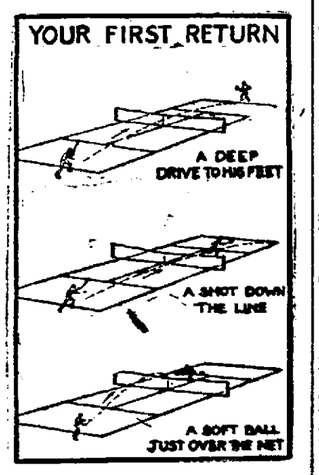

Dempsey is very fast in his work and his wind seems sound. He has developed the speed of a lightweight but he seems to have sacrificed punch for speed. He does not snap over his punches as he used to, and when they land they haven't the old Dempsey power behind them.

De Forest Watches Workout

Jimmy De Forest who trained Dempsey up to the heavyweight championship and who was given "the air" recently by Firpo, saw the champion workout yesterday. He said he was not overly impressed with the form he showed, but he said that he still believed that Firpo had no chance to win the championship.

OMAHA, Sept. 10.—"Tiny" Herman, heavyweight, has been offered $15,000 by a South American syndicate to fight Luis Firpo in Buenos Aires in November.

LITTLE LESSONS IN TENNIS

What is the best way to make your first return?

Answered by

MANUEL ALONSO.

Famous Spanish player, easily the sensation of the 1923 tennis season. "Best European player today, possibly world champion in 1924," says Tilden. Defeated Tilden in Illinois state championship match in July. Runner-up to Tilden in numerous 1923 matches, including national clay court championship.

It depends somewhat on your opponent. If he plays back, drive deep to his feet, or mix this up with cross court shots, then shoot one down the line. If he is a good volleyer and usually comes up to the net after his serve, don't drive to him, but return a soft ball just over the net to his feet, alternating with shots down the line. Or lob over the volleyer's head, if he is not too tall. In doubles never drive at the net player—lob over him, or shoot across court to the server.

Journal Will Announce Blow-by-Blow Details of Dempsey-Firpo Bout Friday

Blow-by-blow details of the Dempsey-Firpo fight will be megaphoned from the Journal office Friday night. As usual, Monte Munn, with the voice you can all hear, will do the announcing. The big fight will probably start about 8 p. m., Lincoln time.

A daily story by Louis Firpo is now appearing in the Journal. Firpo will also tell what he thinks of the fight, whichever way it goes. Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, will visit Firpo's and Dempsey's camps writing a preliminary story about each one with his choice as the winner and then write a descriptive story of the fight from the ringside. These are features you can hardly afford to miss.

Luis Firpo Relates Fable About Tiger, Elephant and Grey Monkey

South American Points Out Folly of Trying to Adopt Some New Style of Fighting—Recalls Corbett-Sullivan Bout.

By Luis Angel Firpo.
Translated by Williams Slavens McNutt.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 10.—Today I shall tell a little story in the way one speaks for children. Once upon a time in a jungle there was a tiger who was a great fighter. He fought so well with his teeth and claws that all the other beasts were jealous of him. All but one at least. There was, in this jungle, a huge elephant who was also a great fighter. The elephant did not fight with teeth and claws because, of course, he had none. He fought by using his trunk as an arm with which to crush his foes and by kneeling upon his enemies.

The tiger had whipped every animal in the jungle but the elephant, and the elephant had defeated every one but the tiger. So then the tiger said he would beat the elephant and the elephant said he would beat the tiger and they began to train to fight each other.

Chattering Grey Monkey.

In the jungle was an old grey monkey who had never fought anybody and who even would never have been able to fight even had he had the courage to try. But all his life he had sat in the tree tops and watched the other animals fight and it was said of him he had closely observed so many battles that he was very wise.

When the lion jumped for the deer and missed, the monkey could tell him what was wrong with his spring, and when the deer tried to dodge the lion and slipped the monkey could tell the deer's relatives what had been wrong with the foot work. This monkey who could not fight became a beast of great reputation and all those who could fight well and wished to know how to fight better went to him and gave him cocoanuts to teach them tricks.

So when the tiger began to train to fight the elephant he went to the monkey for advice. "You might be a great fighter," said the monkey, "if you would only change your method. Do as the elephant does. Do not use your teeth in crushing the line from them. If you kneel on the elephant properly you will surely kill him."

Elephant Also Gets Advice.

Then the elephant came to the monkey and asked advice, and the monkey said: "Get someone to gnaw off your toe nails until they are sharp like the tiger's claws and make use of them to scratch and then, too, instead of kneeling on your foes as you have done in the past, try biting them and some day you may amount to something as a fighter."

So the tiger practiced kneeling and the elephant practiced biting. I do not know what happened when they fought but I am sure it must have been a funny combat. Perhaps if Dempsey were to listen to his critics and I were to listen to mine, the fight at the Polo grounds would be very funny, also. Who knows? Maybe it is not a very good fable, this one I have told you about, but it teaches me one thing. That is that it is better for the elephant to fight like the elephant and the tiger to fight like a tiger.

For me I am Luis Angel Firpo, and if I am to win then I must fight like myself, and not try to do it like some one who is not Luis Angel Firpo. If I shall lose, then it will be because Luis Firpo at his best cannot win and not because Luis was foolish and tried to be some sort of a person he is not. I may be Luis the elephant, or Luis the tiger, but I am not a Luis who listens too long to the chattering of gray monkeys in the trees.

Here's One for Experts.

I think it is always best that a man who fights for a living should use his fists in the ring to answer the arguments of those who write for a living. But they ask me that I say something in answer to the many critics who write that I am sure to meet defeat because I cannot defend myself. I will answer that by asking the critics which man was hit the most often by Willard, myself or Floyd Johnson?

Those who know will tell you that Willard hit Johnson more often than he hit Luis Firpo. Johnson is a fast man, a good boxer, so they say. Why then was Willard able to hit more often than he hit me? Maybe the boxing critics forget it is said that the best defense is a good offense. Even the men who admire me the least admit that I have something admirable in the way of offense. Who knows? I would ask, too, that my friends remember the time a long while ago when a slender young man from San Francisco was matched to meet the great John L. Sullivan.

The slender young man—Corbett was the name—did not box the way the critics of that time said a man should box if he would defeat Sullivan. No, he boxed in the way he thought to be best for him and every one said that it was funny to think he could defeat the giant heavyweight with such soft tapping blows. But Corbett won in his own way and became the founder of a new school of prize fighters. Now I come with my own way of fighting, which is perhaps the way Sullivan fought.

Offense is His Defense.

I do not say beforehand that I shall surely have the success that was the portion of Corbett. But if I win by hard smashing blows and make an offense my defense, I do not say that the boxing world will not be more astonished than at that time long ago when John L. Sullivan sank beaten to the canvas under the shower of blows from the slender young man who could not hit hard enough to hurt a grown man, according to the critics, and who was given no chance to win by the experts who now deny that I can gain the victory.

So Jack learned a lesson after that. He swore on his set of Gideon Bibles that thereafter he would learn the home language of his opponents and taunt them with his erudition.

To-day's training camp news swirls along like this:

SARATOGA—The champion put in a busy day with his books. He started reading "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" in the original Spanish and got as far as the second horse. After a light supper of chili con carne he took a shower bath with Castile soap.

ATLANTIC CITY—Firpo has taken up reading Luther Burbank. He is engrossed in the chapter on growing cauliflower ears to American skulls.

SARATOGA—The champ is absorbed in Ibanez's "Blood and Sand." He says he will knock them both out of Firpo.

NEW YORK—Jack Kearns skimmed thru J. P. Morgan's first primer today preparatory to chatting with Tex Rickard.

HERB DEWITZ HAS CLOSE CALL WITH TYPHOID GERM

Herb Dewitz, Husker backfield man, will probably call some of the signals this season, just missed being thrown for a large loss by typhoid fever. He has been in a Norfolk hospital for the last ten days but the fever was checked before it had hardly got started. Herb is a bit pale but is feeling all right again. A bad seige of the fever would have kept him out of the game all season.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Fred Goodman, Milwaukee, and Frankie Schaefer, Chicago, will fight ten rounds in an East Chicago show September 15.

FORMER ATHLETIC DIRECTOR IS HERE

Fred Luehring Stops Off Enroute Back to Minnesota—Gratified at Progress of Husker Athletic Program.

Fred W. Luehring, formerly athletic director at Nebraska university and now holding the same position with the University of Minnesota, stopped off in Lincoln for a short fanning bee with his old friends. Mr. Luehring has been visiting his mother in Kansas and is on his way back to Minnesota. He leaves here Monday evening.

He called on Fred Dawson, Husker booster, Monday morning, but lost no time in explaining that it was merely a conversation dealing with this and that but in no way connected with a future game with Minnesota.

Mr. Luehring took a look at the stadium and expressed gratification. "Everything here looks like it is going forward by leaps, from an athletic point of view," he said.

He is going to try to be on hand when the stadium is dedicated, October 27, when Kansas plays here.

Mr. Luehring feels particularly proud of the progress made by the Husker institution as it was during his regime that the athletic program on the enlarged scale began to take form.

State Leaguers In All Iowa Tournament

Scott Fitz, Art Stolzer, Dondurant, Cleve, and Welsh, all members of the championship Lincoln state league club, have returned from Hamburg, Iowa, where they played with the Sycamore, Iowa, club and tied with it in other games for first money.

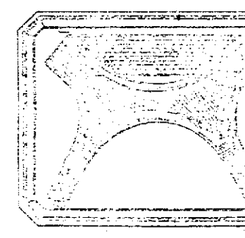

"We'd not be adverse to accepting a little work with any club in reason. Telegram, telephone or radio contracts will be filed. Our cable address is 'Saratoga, Lincoln,'" Scott Fitz said, on behalf of the players and himself.

LATEST MARKETS

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Grain prices slumped and closed lower on the Chicago board of trade today.

Export business aggregated 300,000 bushels. Russia is faced with a famine as a result of a sharp cut n supplies made by export business, cables declared. Exports from the United States and Canada, up to July 1, totaled 2,944,000 bushels compared with 7,347,000 bushels last year.

Corn weakened when traders showed a disposition to await the government report to be issued late today. Optimists expected the statement to show a good condition and favorable yields everywhere. The visible supply, compared with last week, increased.

Oats was dull and neglected. Selling developed when the visible supply showed an increase.

Provisions were dull.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Grain prices opened irregular on the Chicago board of trade today.

Early trade in wheat was of a mixed nature, due principally to an erratic Liverpool market and weakness in Winnipeg. Liverpool opened unchanged to fractionally lower with the main weakness in the October delivery, but at 2 p. m. was unchanged to fractionally higher with the October delivery making the sharpest advance. Receipts were 260 cars.

Corn met selling pressure, but on the dip a fair class of buying developed upon receipt of unfavorable crop news. The continued cool weather and reports of frost in sections of Illinois were responsible for the buying spurt. Receipts, 270 cars.

Oats were dull and neglected. The market was devoid of any individuality. Receipts were 175 cars.

Provisions were irregular.

Chicago Tribune Report.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Canada has as large, if not a larger, wheat crop than last year when the 376,000,000,000 bushels produced was a record. This wheat will move freely, weather permitting, as it always does, and will tax the storage and transportation facilities for the next three months or more.

This means that a strong test of the wheat market is near at hand. So far the winter wheat movement has been rather disappointing in size. Since July 1, primary markets have received 112,024,000 bushels against 116,656,000 bushels last year. The visible supply has increased more than 30,000,000 bushels in two months while Chicago stocks have increased nearly 18,000,000 bushels. Prices, however, are only ½c lower on September and ¼c higher on December than two months ago.

Mills have stocked up with wheat the last two months, while foreigners have allowed theirs to run down. Part of the milling wheat has been hedged by sales of flour and some by sales of futures. Canadian wheat will probably be hedged in the different markets.

The thing that stands out is that cash premiums have hardened in all winter wheat markets.

The corn crop needs a week to three weeks or more to mature and dry, warm weather would be beneficial. In the northwest ther is a larger crop than usual that is well advanced and is expecte dto move early. This accounts for much of the bearishness toward the deferred deliveries.

Oats are being consumed on the farms to a large extent as they are lower than other feed.—Lamson.

Grain Market Opinions.

J. M. Simpson: I think a conservative attitude on the constructive side of the market the best. The corn market runs into liberal selling on the advance. Think it's a sale on the hard spots.

Hulburd Warren & Chandler: Rye should sell higher, but as for wheat and corn we are not so sure.

Clement Curtis & Co.: The first pressure of the Canadian crop movement is likely to be depressing.

Harris Winthrop & Co.: There seems to be little hope for any materal assistance from the foreign buyer.

Bartlett-Frazier & Co.: We do not believe prices will be depressed to any appreciable degree.

Thomson McKinnon: Conditions offer little encouragement for higher prices.

Logan & Bryan: We look for only temporary declines.

J. A. White: Lot weak holdings sold Saturday. Believe market left in stronger shape on that account. Do not expect violent advance, but look for higher trend this week. Wheat should gain on corn.—Lamson.

Journal of Commerce Report.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—The grain list as a whole shows tability. Operations in the futures, however, are based largely on developments in the cash markets. In the latter, however, offerings were barely equal to requirements.

America, it is conceded, has a surplus of wheat which bids fair to leave a heavy carry-over next July, unless the foreign demand picks up materially in the meantime. It is believed, however, that farm consumption of wheat this year will be much in excess of previous years and that the foreign situation is being camouflaged.

All markets, however, lack speculative interest as a result of the grain futures act, recently enacted. Speculation is needed. Besides the regular consumptive buyers, there must be the investor to help carry the burden in the times of greatest plenty.—Lamson.

Omaha Livestock Market.

OMAHA, Sept. 10.—Cattle—Receipts, 18,000. Receipts of cattle were heavy for the opening day of the week and as usual at this time of year were made up largely of western rangers. With only moderate offerings of corn-fed steers, these moved freely at prices strong to 15@25c higher than the close of last week. Western range cattle ruled slow to 10@15c lower on both beef steers and cows, while desirable feeders and stock cattle held about steady at last week's lower levels.

Hogs—Receipts, 7,500. Arrivals of hogs this morning were of only fair proportion and demand from shippers showed a good deal of activity, with buyers taking on most of their requirements that looked 10@25c higher than Saturday. Packers were a little slow to pay the advance and trading was late in getting under way, with packer buyers bidding around steady figures, but salesmen holding off for better prices.

Sheep—Receipts, 18,000. Fat stuff was rather scarce this morning and with demand fairly good prices look fully steady to in spots a little stronger. Inquiries for feeders were fairly numerous and the market early looked strong to 25c higher with best feeders here going in a $13.00@13.25 range.

Wall Street Journal Review.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—World affairs at the start of the new week exhibited the greatest degree of composure seen for some time. With Greece and Italy on more amicable terms, Germany and France ready to reopen the reparations negotiations and the anthracite strike out of the way, most of the factors recently disturbing the stock market were removed.

The result was that stocks had a confident tone in the early dealings.

Can shares were the outstanding features of the industrial group. Continental Can made a 1923 high at 52⅜, while American Can moved up 1 to 99½.

Opening prices: Burns Brothers "B" 25½, up ¼; Republic Steel 50¼, off ¼; Sinclair 20⅞, up ¼; U. S. Steel 92⅝, off ⅛; Baldwin 123¾, off ¼; Pan-American Petroleum 59⅜, up ⅜; American Can 99, up ½; B. & O. 50½; St. Paul 17½, up ⅜; Erie 14¾, off ⅛; U. S. Rubber 42⅜, off ⅜; Atchison 98; Southern Pacific 88¾, off ⅛; New York Central 100⅜, up ¼; Southern railway 34⅞, up ⅜.

Stock Market Opinions.

Clark-Childs & Co.: The short interest in independent steels seems weak.

Wellman & Co.: We advise purchases on all declines.

Stein Alstrin: Would take profits on the bulges.

Logan & Bryan: Not unreasonable to expect a temporary reactionary period.

Post & Flagg: Outside of Governor Pinchot's suggestion to President Coolidge that the interstate commerce commission reduce freight rates on coal so that the consumer will not have to pay increased cost of production, there is nothing in the news this morning that may be construed as bearish. As was expected, the secretary of the treasury has announced a new issue of certificates of indebtedness to the amount of $200,000,000, maturing in six months. This, with th heavy tax payments scheduled for Saturday may cause the money market especially call money, to show a gradually lightening tendency. The ability of the market to hold its own in the face of the combination of depressing news which has appeared of late, speaks well for both technical and fundamental conditions. This demonstration of strength shows that stocks are in strong hands and naturally has increased sentiment for the constructive side. So far as one may depend upon trade reports everything points to an increased volume of general business within the next few months. Railroad traffic returns tonnage handled rather than earnings suggest that better prices are to come, especially for the dividend paying rails while the low priced roads which have been most depressed of late will probably do much better from now. The settlement of the coal strike was not a big factor on Saturday when the news came out, but it promises to exert a beneficial influence on prices this wek. While the trend of the market is upward there is not likely to be much activity until some incentive comes along to lift the market out of its present rut.—Lamson.

Republicanism's Future.

Lowell Courier-Citizen: Not the smallest of the problems that face President Coolidge is that of wisely filling his position as leader of the republican party. Upon his success in re-establishing the republican end of the bi-party system his own political future will most probably depend. His nomination, without a reunited party behind him, would be unlikely; his election in such circumstances, practically impossible. Much more, furthermore, is involved than the fortunes of an individual. If the United States is not destined to follow European example in evolving, or degenerating into a bloc system of small self-seeking political groups the appearance of a messiah of renascent republicanism is about now due. It is within the possibilities that President Coolidge may be just that messiah.

A somewhat disintegrated party organization President Coolidge has inherited, thru no fault of the late president, but as a consequence of a number of unfortunate conditions. Republican majorities that were colossal in 1920 have disappeared and deficits taken their place in more recent elections. Old strongholds of the party, such as Minnesota have revolted and turned radical. Much good work done by the present administration has not prevented the average voter from being very critical of its achievements. Some of the utterances of the chairman of the national committee have aroused widespread distrust of the present leadership.

By some republican in place of authority, and most appropriately by the president himself, momentous decisions should be made in the next few months.

Whether it will be the general policy of the republican party to make concessions to radicalism or to resist it ought to be decided before the campaign of 1924 is under way.

The agrarian revolt in the west may presently subside just as populism was gradually dissipated a generation ago. It is likely, however, to be still in evidence a year and even two years hence. If the party yields to the demands of the farm bloc and commits itself to socialistic measures meant to relieve the farmers it runs a serious risk of permanently alienating the solid business interests of the country.

A policy of facing both ways may be tried but it runs the risk of giving pleasure in neither direction.

Similarity as to the personnel of leadership in the party. It should seemingly be up to the president to say, in broad terms, what nowadays constitutes good republicanism.

Increasingly many people here in the east believe that even at the peril of losing the election of 1924 the republican party ought to cast into outer darkness the LaFollettes, Brookharts, Borahs and Hiram Johnsons with whom its councils are now plagued. These men, on the other hand, represent considerable constituencies which conceivably might be peeved if their spokesmen should be ostracized. They might become democratic.

Some observers see signs of an east vs. west political alignment. This cleavage would correspond, certainly, to present realities. It would stand for a genuine division along lines of personal and sectional interest. Should the republican party, then, stand with the east or with the west or endeavor, as in the recent past it has successfully done, to straddle between the two? President Coolidge's clear Yankee head may yet have to settle this increasingly urgent question.

If eastern sentiment rules the party republicanism possibly may be committed to the world court, to which project President Harding was pathetically devoted. In the event, however, of a surrender to western radicalism the chance of any immediate American participation in world affairs goes glimmering. The party, of course, might leave in its platform a door leading toward the league of nations but it would be a trap door, carefully concealed from the view of Kansas and California. A vexatious problem that may have to be met soon is how to avoid a party split on this very fundamental issue of national isolation vs. international relationship.

If it can be determined what constitutes a good republican in the present era then a natural leader of men, such as a prsident under the bi-party system ought to be, will move to rebuild the republican machine. Politics no more goes of itself than does a tractor. President Coolidge may need to apply all the lessons of management and manipulation which he saw in operation in Massachusetts, a state with a notably efficient republican organization.

Herein indeed, lies one considerable hope that a Bay state president may be able to straighten out the affairs of a great national party. In this state, tho it may occasionally have had its reverses, republicanism has not been shot to pieces as has befallen in parts of the west. Year in and year out the machinery has functioned and during several recent years Calvin Coolidge was an integral part of the state machine. He then proved himself a thoro student of politics as traditionally practiced in this and other American states.

Human nature is largely independent of geography. If President Coolidge can give time and thought to organizing the national republican party in accordance with the principles of organization with which he became familiar in Massachusetts he will almost certainly emerge as an adored leader of a revivified party.

Hard to Understand.

A person may think himself the cat's meow, and he may well be all that, but it is simply wonderful how the universe can beat him out of it. (I am speaking now on the subject of "Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud, or the Delinquencies of Friend Martin.")

And, firstly, a man's ill luck, or lack of all luck, is not his own fault, necessarily. It is just a sort of happening. He is caught out in cosmical weather with no umbrella and no place to dodge into. Note the clear-cut biblical statement:

"Were those men on whom the tower of Siloam fell sinners above all other men? I tell you, nay!"

They simply happened to be there when the tower fell and so they were crushed. It was not their fault—but it was a very bad job for them, just the same. Let us keep as careful a lookout as possible, especially for the careless driver.

Probably the lady of the worst fortune on earth was the very delightful Cecily, duchess of York, who departed this life (and glad to go, I suspect,) on the 31st day of May, 1495, just after Christopher Columbus had made a very important discovery. (Can you guess what it was?)

Cecily was doomed to witness in her own family more appalling calamities than probably are found in the history of any other individual.

Twenty-six of her closest relatives, thru whom she hoped to inherit the throne of England, were killed in battle, poisoned or murdered during her lifetime.

Her father was that rich and powerful nobleman, Ralph Neville, earl of Westmoreland, the ancestor (doubtless) of our own James E. Neville, and Cecily was the youngest of twenty-one children. On her becoming the wife of Richard Plantagenet, duke of York, her family exerted all their influence to place her on the throne of England.

After a series of splendid achievements, the whole family of Nevilles was swept away, long before their sister Cecily had descended in sorrow to her grave.

Rodrigo de Triana was so disgusted with fate that he turned Mohammedan and abjured the Christian religion. Do you recall Rodrigo de Triana? He was one of the common sailors with Columbus when the admiral came over to discover us. The Spanish royal couple had promised a certain sum of prize money to the first one who discovered land.

About 2 o'clock in the morning of October 12, 1492, Triana, who was standing watch, emitted several terrible yells of "Tierra! Tierra!" and danced around like a rooster on a hot grating. Everyone turned out and looked overboard, including the great Christopher, but little could be made out. Triana, however, insisted that he had sighted land. And sure enough, there it was in the morning.

Triana should have received the prize. But when they got back to Spain, Columbus insisted that he had seen a light on the coast the previous evening. He protested this so vehemently to the royal couple that it was necessary to pay him the money. Poor Triana, bereft of his prize, abandoned his native land and emigrated to Africa.

Doubtless, the honest mariner ended his life peaceably in his harem. From the religious point of view, the first result of the discovery was to reinforce not Christianity, but Mohammedanism, since Triana no longer cared to live among Christians, who robbed him both of his glory and his prize money. But that is what you get. What shall we say about it? Perhaps the less said the better.

It is such stories and such examples of fate as these that throw Friend Martin's conduct into a clearer and whiter light, when that little old man with the chin whiskers comes around in stockinged feet at night, or while you are out at luncheon, and leaves a bale of the United States treasury alfalfa in your office chair with your name on it and marked "Special." Let us say nothing unpleasant about fate and providence and luck. Good luck is just as common as bad luck. Even now Martin may be baling it up?

Who knows?

MEN AND THINGS.

An official organ of the coal trade, discussing Mr. Bryan's plan for selling coal, holds that the fact that the state can undersell the coal dealer casts no reflection on the business ability nor integrity of the dealer. The state could do the same with sugar, gasoline, clothing and other necessities. The state would buy in vast quantities, would take no profit, would sell only for cash, would maintain no expensive plant to give service to the buyer and would pay no taxes. All these things the merchant has to do. The business world could be broken down by the interference of the state, and it is pointed out that unless the state goes into a line of business permanently it has no moral right to get into it just long enough to wreck the business men who have offered service to the public for years.

A Kansas wheat grower has figured the cost of raising wheat at $13.20 an acre. He puts the interest on capital investment at $5, plowing $1.50, harrowing 25 cents, drilling 33 cents, harvesting $2.50, threshing $2.25, hauling 72 cents and seed and seeding 65 cents. Figuring on a yield of eighteen bushels to the acre, he discovers that at present prices ninety acres of land would net the farmer $4 profit. It is said that at one time half a dozen gamblers on the Chicago board of trade made more money in a week than all the farmers of Kansas in a year. The laboring man of the city will note in these figures, however, that the growing of wheat gave the farmer some employment for which he is allowed pay in estimating the cost of great growing The city laborer gets pay for his work, but no pay for profit made on his work.

The city business man plans to get paid for his labor, setting the rate of pay very often rather high, and after paying that, hopes to see the business produce enough to give a handsome profit at the end of the year. The business man would not care to conduct a business for a meager salary. He would hunt some other line of activity before long if his business did not pay more than a salary. The city laborer has long had it in mind (and in fact often does) to make a fight for a part of the profits of the business. Some business concerns have developed the bonus plan, by which a portion of the profits is divided among the employes. If the business prospers the employe gains. The trouble the farmer finds is to make his business prosper.

A survey of the retail credit business in Nebraska made by the college of business administration of the state university has resulted in the conclusion being reached that it is difficult to prove that the amount of sales is increased thru the use of retail credit. It is admitted to be a general assumption of merchants that credit increases the sales volume, because it offers service and conveniences not possible in cash transactions. The cost of credit can be reached rather definitely. One item is particularly striking. In the survey made it is shown that the percentage of goods returned on cash sales ranged from 1.4 to 1.9 per cent, while the percentage of goods returned from credit sales ranged from 6.9 to 15.9 per cent. In something over twenty-five stores the average age of accounts before payment ranged from 36.8 to 172.1 days in a period of six months.

The proposition to hold a special election to vote bonds for completion of the Lincoln county court house is being discussed in North Platte. There is a disposition on the part of some of the citizens to hold court house completion in abeyance until court procedure has disposed of the scandal in county management and the people are apprised as to who is to blame for the situation in which they have found their county's business. Observers who have some knowledge of the feeling of the voters there are convinced it would be better to wait the end of court actions before asking the people to vote more money to complete the building which was well under way when the old building was burned.

A theory that interests us is propounded in supreme court by an attorney. He says that if the courts, during a series of years, hold consistently that a section of the constitution means thus and so it thereby becomes as much a part of the constitution as tho that document contained it in express and appropriate language. He goes further to say that under these circumstances no legislature can give a different interpretation in the form of a statute, and that the only way the people can change that interpretation is by amending the constitution. The voice of the legislature has been the voice of the people for a long time. The legislature cannot, of course, change the constitution by merely passing a law. But can the courts do it by passing an opinion?

One reason why taxes increase is that the rich men of the country, in order to avoid an income tax, have been putting vast amounts of their money in tax-exempt securities. Every dollar thus divested of the duty of paying its share of the taxes of the nation, state and minor subdivisions calls for another dollar from the rest of the taxpayers to replace it. This is a bad condition that is growing worse. Everybody is interested because everybody pays taxes. Those who think that they do not because they are not called upon to contribute to the tax collector overlook entirely the fact that taxes form one of the costs of doing business, and that these are included in rents and the prices of food, clothing, necessities and luxuries.

An elderly man recently wrote in to find out if there is any state institution in which a blind and crippled person could be cared for. An inquiry develops that the only helping hand the state holds out to the blind is a school where the youthful ones may be usefully taught, but that nowhere else, unless the person happens to be an old soldier or the widow of an old soldier and therefore eligible to the soldiers' home, can such an afflicted person be taken in, save the county poorhouse. If one is feeble-minded or insane, the state will furnish a home and attendance, but the only other way to secure its fostering care is for a blind person to do something that will merit a prison sentence.

As, for instance. A large percentage of the money paid to widows by life insurance companies is dissipated at the end of five years, largely because the women have not been trained in the handling of money. To meet this situation the larger companies, possibly all of them, are offering income policies, which provide for monthly payments to children in order that they may be sure of an education and to a widow that she may be certain to have support. Yet how many persons know that such a good thing is to be bought and on what terms it may be secured?

In Lincoln a colored evangelist, in exhorting the wicked to turn from their ways, said the wrath of God was about to descend upon mankind because of the wickedness of the world. The next day the newspapers carried the story of the Japanese disaster. The evangelist was not slow to point out that the prediction made had come true, and to make it plain that punishment from misdeeds may come in this manner. Thus are the convulsions of the elements and the plagues that fall upon mankind fastened directly in the minds of some upon the deity.

They are engaged, but we don't care anything about that. What we want to know is what their names are. His name begins with "C". You are to print his name in the first upright column, and complete the four words of seven letters each. What are their names?

Laws Alone Won't Do It.

The wheat market has been giving another example of the difficulty of finding legislative remedies for economic ills. Quotations have bone below the dollar level for the first time in nine years, although practically every statutory help suggested has been provided for the farmers.

The last Congress had every reason and every desire to relieve the troubles of the agricultural regions of the country. There is, indeed, testimony from the farmers themselves on this point, for only a day or two ago Gray Silver, speaking for the American Farm Bureau federation, said in a formal statment that more laws wanted by farmers had been enacted in the sessions closing last March than in twenty years of previous legislation together.

Grains received especial attention at Washington. Not only was the duty on them increased in the Fordney-McCumber tariff, but before that act was introduced, a temporary, emergency tariff was rushed thru to save the farmer. The Capper-Tincher bill, drafted to prevent speculation manipulation in cereals, was only one other of a list of laws in behalf of grain producers.

In the face of all these efforts to better the condition of farmers, the price that they are to receive for one of their principal crops continues to sag downward. It would seem that some other method for dealing with the conditions must be sought, since framing and enacting new laws has been found useless. Keping in mind former experiences with other crops may help. A couple of years ago cotton and corn were so cheap that they were almost unsalebale at any figure.

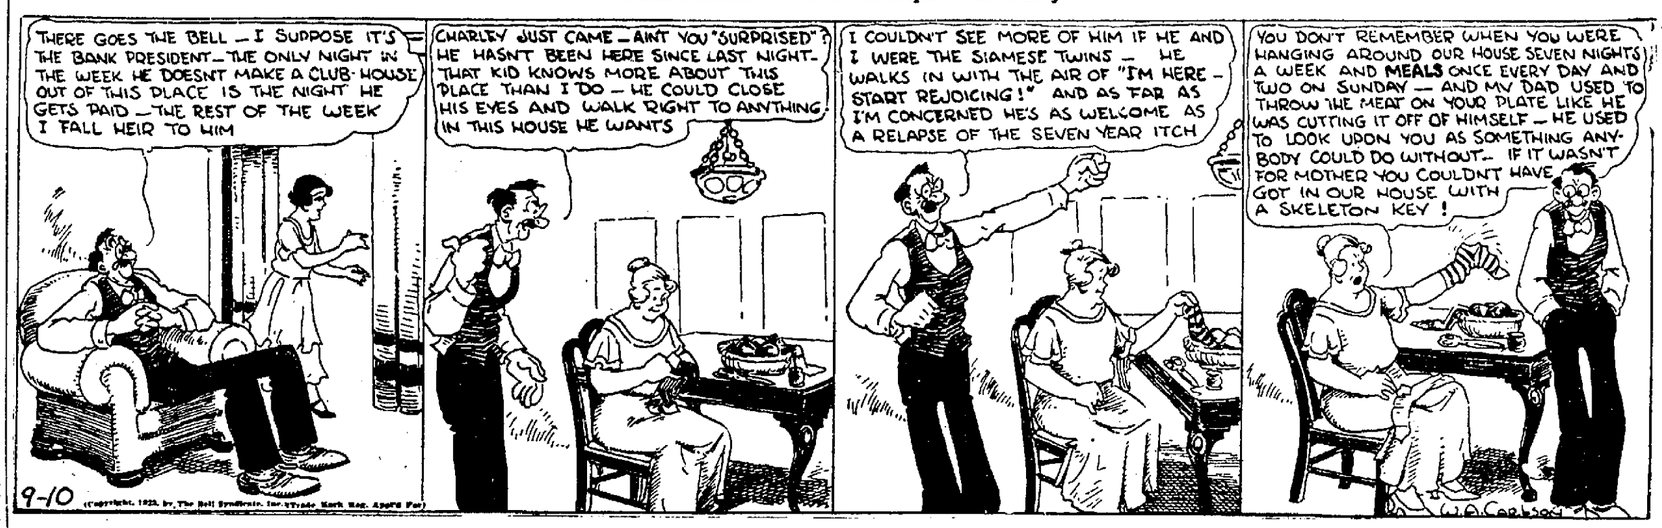

Cotton was quoted at around eight cents; it is three times that and more today. Corn was selling at eighteen cents and farmers were burning it for fuel because coal prices were high. Corn brings better than eighty cents a bushel in Chicago now with three bumper crops in a row. Perhaps wheat will follow their course and return to higher levels of price before many months.—Detroit Free Press.

Bent on German Collapse.

New Republic: "Nothing can swerve France from her determination never to let go her hand on Germany until that nation has totally collapsed both economically and politically. No matter what the attitude of England, France will continue her work of destroying Germany." So said Mr. John Foster Dulles recently after a visit of some months to the continent of Europe. Mr. Dulles is a moderate, well informed and cautious man who weighs his words and means what he says. If what he says is true, as we believe it is, the American people are being systematically misled about the realities of European politics by the pro-French American press, just as before the war they were systematically misled about the designs of the German government and the consequences thereof. They will again wake up some morning and find that as a result of having encouraged France to go ahead, as they formerly by indirection encouraged Germany, they will be enveloped by another international conflagration which cannot be extinguished without their assistance. The words of Mr. Dulles express the central fact about the political situation on the European continent. If you do not accept them you cannot possibly act effectively and remedially.
